HISTORIC DAY FOR THE PEOPLE OF DE KALB COUNTY

LAY CORNERSTONE OF COUNTY TEMPLE

Governor Marshall and Masonic Lodges Honor the Ceremonies Held in Auburn, the County Seat.

BEAUTIFUL WEATHER; IMMENSE CROWD

Northeastern Indiana and Almost Whole of De Kalb County Pour Into the Pretty Little City.

[Sentinel Staff Correspondence.]

Auburn, Ind., July 27.—If DeKalb county has ever had a greater day than this the oldest inhabitant has not come forward to tell of it. The largest crowd this pretty little city has ever harbored is here today to participate in the ceremony of laying the cornerstone of DeKalb county's new court house.

With the governor of the state and notable visitors from near and far here to do honor to the occasion, it is in all ways Auburn's reddest letter day.

It seems that the populace of DeKalb county has turned out en masse to rejoice in this impressive incident that marks the work of building what is to be one of the finest court houses in Indiana.

The four streets that bound the beautiful public square in the heart of the city's down town district is a solid mass of animated, gay and moving humanity.

Masons Conduct Ceremony

The principal address of the day was delivered by Governor Marshall, who spoke at length upon the duties of citizenship and some of the great civic problems that now confront the country. Other leading addresses were by Judge Frank M. Powers, of the DeKalb-Steuben circuit court, and Hon. Newton W. Gilbert, vice governor of the Philippines.

The ceremony of laying the cornerstone was in charge of the Masonic fraternity. William C. Geake, of Fort Wayne was designated by the grand master of the Indiana lodge to act for him on this occasion. It was 11:15 this morning when the impressive ceremony began.

There were present about 100 members of the Masonic bodies of Fort Wayne. Of these sixty-one came on a special interurban car. The Masonic lodges of Auburn, Garrett, Spencerville, Waterloo, Angola, Churubusco, Columbia City, Kendallville and Butler came as organized bodies and there were delegations and visitors from many other lodges in northeastern Indiana and northwestern Ohio.

The Mason assembled at Masonic hall and from there marched in procession to the scene of the ceremonies at the northwest corner of the square.

The court house square had been fenced in and the public was barred from entrance until after the Masonic bodies had entered. Then the gates were thrown open and the people quickly jammed the enclosure to its capacity.

WILLIAM C. GEAKE,
Of Fort Wayne, Master of Masonic Ceremonies at Auburn.

The Officiating Masons.

Acting Grand Master Geake had appointed the acting grand officers from DeKalb lodge, No. 214, F. & A. M., the complete roster for the ceremony being as follows:

Most Worshipful Grand Master—William C. Geake.

Most Worshipful Deputy Grand Master—Sam L. Davenport.

Most Worshipful Grand Senior Warden—Joseph Glover.

Most Worshipful Junior Warden—Philip S. Holman.

Grand Secretary—Thomas L. Sprott.

Grand Treasurer—Fred W. Knott.

Grand Chaplain—Frank A. Calvin.

Grand Marshal—Hubert E. Hartman.

It was some time after the hour appointed by the program before the ceremonies were begun. At 11:15 the affair was under way. Guy M. Mahurin, of the Fort Wayne firm of architects who designed the building, on behalf of the commissioners of DeKalb county formally requested the Masons to lay the cornerstone. Rev. E. F. Albertson, of Butler, offered prayer and then the Masons performed their ritualistic ceremony for such occasions.

The huge stone was hoisted into place, the box containing the mementoes of the occasion was put in the chiseled receptacle and the big stone was sealed.

Grand Master Geake's Address.

At the conclusion of the ritualistic ceremonies Acting Grand Master Geake delivered the address for the occasion. He spoke in part as follows:

Address of W. C. Geake.

The master of ceremonies at the cornerstone laying was Attorney William C. Geake, of Fort Wayne, who delivered one of the two principal addresses of the day. His address was a splendid review of the growth of Masonry and the wonderful advancement of civilization and religion, in which Masonry has always played a prominent part. In closing Mr. Geake said:

"The past two or three centuries has witnessed a most remarkable growth in the political and religious liberty of mankind, which has resulted in a large participation, by the individual, in the affairs of government, a world-wide diffusion of knowledge and a greater domestic happiness than ever before known in all human history. These wonderful changes in the thoughts, the views, the desires, and the aspirations of the people have found expression in wood, stone, brick, steel and other material, and on every hand are to be found great governmental buildings, denominational churches, schools, colleges, libraries, hospitals, fraternal buildings, and in the large centers of population, huge structures for the carrying on of trade and commerce.

Uses Have Advanced.

"We, of the present day, have possibly added nothing of importance to the building art of bygone ages, but in the uses and purposes for which we build the present age far excels all that has gone before.

"We no longer rear splendid temples to dedicate to unknown deities; we no longer build great pyramids to gratify the ambition or perpetuate the memories of tyrant kings; we no longer construct walled cities to turn back hostile forces in quest of blood and treasure; we no longer erect vast amphitheaters in which human blood is sacrificed to make a Roman holiday. When man emerged from the gloom of the dark ages there came a mental awakening which became broader and deeper with the passing years, and today he builds for peace, for progress, for commerce and for that moral and spiritual enlightenment which has made this the golden age of all the ages.

Structure Is a Symbol.

"This very structure now in process of erection typifies, in a measure, the point to which society has advanced since this old world became inhabited by man, not in point of form, beauty, or style of architecture, but rather in the use that will be made of it when completed. While it will be used as a repository for the records of your property and for the transaction of routine county business, here also will be located one of the greatest safeguards in any republic, a free and untrammelled court of justice. Before it all men are equal; before it right, not might, will prevail; before it the weak and the innocent will be protected; before it the wrong-doer must come and receive the penalty for his evil deeds. Citizens of DeKalb county, uphold the power and dignity of your court, obey its mandates, support its decrees, for our courts are this nation's last hope, and should they in the future fail or even falter in the discharge of their sacred duties, the art of self-government would receive a blow which would be felt by all liberty-loving people to the end of time."

What the Stone Contains.

The relic box placed in the cornerstone contains a great variety of relics that will be prized in that far-off day when DeKalb county erects a new court house and the cornerstone laid today is wrenched open and robbed of its secret. The box contains a bible, a square, a compass and trowel, emblematic of the Masonic fraternity; copy of the invitation from DeKalb lodge, No. 214, to the cornerstone laying; W. C. Geake's address, photographic views of Auburn, including churches, school houses and public buildings, copies of newspapers, United States flag, old coins, copy of the Methodist Episcopal discipline, key to the front door of the old court house, emblematic button of the Grand Army of the Republic, a bullet picked up on a southern battlefield by Hon J. D. Leighty, copy of the official program of the day, roster of the city officials of Auburn and of the county officials of DeKalb, steel die bearing the name of E. Keiham and photographs of Mahurin & Mahurin, architects of the building.

DAN M. LINK,
Chairman of General Arrangements Committee at Auburn.

Afternoon Ceremonies.

At the conclusion of Grand Master Geake's address there was a cessation of the ceremonies until 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

At that hour the general speech-making began from a stand erected on the south side of the court house square. Hon. Jacob D. Leighty, former congressman from the Twelfth district and now living in St. Joe, was president of the day. He opened the afternoon program with a brief address. After the invocation Judge Frank M. Powers, of the DeKalb-Steuben judicial court, was introduced and delivered an address in which he remarked the progress of DeKalb county, her achievements and her future.

Following Judge Powers, Hon. Newton W. Gilbert, vice governor of the Philippines, former lieutenant governor of Indiana and once congressman from the Twelfth district, addressed the assemblage. He was followed by Governor Thomas R. Marshall, of Indiana, who delivered the principal address of the day.

Between the addresses a male quartet sang.

Mr. Link Gives a Luncheon.

After the ceremonies at the cornerstone, which were concluded shortly afternoon, Hon. Dan M. Link, member of the state tax board and chairman of the general committee of arrangements for cornerstone day, gave a luncheon at his home to Governor

Sidewalk Collapses With Weight of Crowd and Boy is Injured.

MANY ARE BRUISED

(Special to The Sentinel).

Auburn, Ind., July 27.—One boy was badly injured and many persons received painful bruises this afternoon when a sidewalk along the Eckhart warehouse building at Ninth and Cedar streets, collapsed under the weight of a large crowd gathered upon it.

Ray Hite, aged 10 years, son of Fred Hite, living near Auburn, had a foot so badly crushed that he will probably be a permanent cripple, and many persons were badly bruised.

The sidewalk is elevated some four or five feet above the ground and a crowd was attracted to it by the playing of the drum corps. Suddenly it gave way and perhaps fifty people went down with it. The injured boy was caught under the timbers and it was necessary to saw some of them away before he could be released. His injuries are very severe, the foot being terribly crushed.

The accident caused some excitement in the great crowd here for the cornerstone ceremonies.

PINCHOT IS AFTER TAFT

Former Government Chief Forester Attacks the Special Message.

PRESIDENT WRONG TO LET LANDS GO

Conservationist Says the Public Interests Are Suffering.

Washington, July 27.—Gifford Pinchot, former government chief forester and now president of the National Conservation association, today issued a statement declaring that President Taft "hedges the root of the matter wholly untouched" in his message to the senate denying that there could be any monopolization of the water front of Controller Bay, Alaska. Mr. Pinchot opens his statement with this charge:

"The president's defense of his course in the Controller Bay affair shows how hard it is to make a good excuse for a bad mistake."

Concluding, Mr. Pinchot says:

"It is unfortunate that the friends of conservation, in their efforts to bring about the development of Alaska for the benefit of the people, are continually obliged to expend their strength against the men who ought to be the protectors of the people's property. It looks to me like unnecessary duplication of work when we must first fight the policemen before we can get a chance to stop the looting."

Gives Interests a Chance.

"In spite of all explanations the fact remains that Mr. Taft in opening the lands around Controller Bay without notice to the public, has given the interests behind Ryan an opportunity to acquire the key to the channel of Controller Bay before the public knew what was going on," says Mr. Pinchot in his statement. "The map, which is a part of the president's message, supported as it is by the testimony of Mr. Graves, of the coast and geodetic survey, before the congressional committee now investigating this question, appears to show that the mile and a half of harbor front taken up by Ryan, together with the facts which the government retains and on which it prohibits private entry, does effectually control the valuable portion of the channel.

Should Have Kept the Lands.

"But whether the president is right or whether the map is right and whoever Ryan and his associates will be shown to represent, it is true and will remain true, that the lands about Controller Bay should never have been let go. The public will agree with Col. Roosevelt that these terminal lands ought to have been kept in the public hands.

"The so-called Ballinger-Pinchot investigation opened the eyes of the public to the extensive and successful efforts which are being made to monopolize the resources of Alaska.

Gave Ryan What He Wanted.

"The omission of the customary thirty days' notice to the public that

WOOL BILL IS PASSED

Senate Puts Through Compromise Measure by LaFollette.

ORIGINAL BILLS ARE VOTED DOWN

Some Doubt as to Course House Democrats Are Likely to Take.

Washington, July 27.—The senate today passed a compromise wool tariff revision bill offered by Senator LaFollette, 48 to 32, after his amendment and the Underwood house wool bill had both been voted down.

The LaFollette amendment to the Underwood bill was offered and voted down, 14 to 66, only the 14 republican insurgents voting for it.

Te next vote was on the Underwood bill, which was defeated, 44 to 36. Except for Senator Brown, of Nebraska, who voted for the bill, the vote was along strict party lines. By a vote of 49 to 31, Senator La Follette secured the re-consideration of the house wool bill, the democrats and insurgents joining in support of the motion.

Senator LaFollette offered a modified substitute of his amendment as a compromise between the democratic house bill and his original bill, upon which democrats and insurgents agreed, and it was passed 48 to 42.

Doubt as to House Democrats.

There is some doubt as to what course the house democrats will pursue with regard to the compromise bill. House Leader Underwood several days ago served notice that the house would not accept the original La Follette bill.

The "regular" republican members of the senate finance committee announced that because of the carrying out of the democratic-republican insurgent wool program they would refuse to serve on the conference committee between the two houses.

Penrose Likes It.

"The situation is entirely to our liking," said Chairman Penrose, of the finance committee. "We are satisfied that the president will veto any bill that can be sent to him within the range prescribed, and we shall proceed next winter with whatever tariff revision may be necessary. Then we shall have the tariff board's report and can work intelligently."

How the Vote Stood.

The vote on the final passage of the compromise bill was:

For the bill: Republicans—Bourne, Oregon; Bristow, Kansas; Brown, Nebraska; Clapp and Nelson, Minnesota; Crawford, South Dakota; Cummins and Kenyon, Iowa; Gronna and McCumber, North Dakota; La Follette, Wisconsin; Poindexter, Washington; Works, California.

Democrats—Bacon, Georgia; Bailey, Texas; Bankhead and Johnston, Alabama; Bryan and Fletcher, Florida; Chamberlain, Oregon; Chilton and

TOOK A QUARTER TO POOR FAMILY

Julius Howenstein Liberal After Return from a Trip.

CITY COURT DOCKET

When Julius Howenstein returned from a trip of three or four weeks he took to his poor family a quarter to provide food for it and expected the household would be able to subsist on the two bits, but Judge Mungovan has some ideas of his own about how a man ought to support his wife and children so he sent the prisoner from the city court to the jail this morning with a fine of $10 and a sentence of thirty days to give him time to think over a lecture he added.

Howenstein was told that when he gets out he must go to work and earn money to support the family unless he wants to spend a longer term in jail. Humane Officer Schlandroff said that last winter he found Howenstein hugged up close to a saloon stove while his family at home had neither fire or fuel. He had a dollar in his pocket and the officer made him go home and buy coal with it. It is also charged that he devotes too much of his time to another woman.

Wilkins Is Let Go.

William Wilkins, held until the police could make an investigation of the Snug saloon, was let go under an indefinite continuance of the charge of public intoxication against him.

No affidavit was filed against Marion Wyatt, the proprietor, but Chief of Police Abbott stated today that he will file a remonstrance against a renewal of the license, which will expire next Monday.

Insulted Two Women.

Bill Farnan was sent over for twenty days on a charge of assault and battery. He insulted two women on the street and when Louis Doenges advised them to report the matter to an officer Farnan hit him. He is 19 years old and said he bought drinks in a Columbia street saloon, but when the prosecutor went after him to get at the bottom he hedged and said his brother bought beer in a bottle and gave it to him.

Raided the Block.

A raid on rooms 31 and 32 of the Pixley-Long block on Berry street resulted in the arrest of two couples who gave assumed names and put up bonds. Each was fined $15 and costs and the hundred dollars in the hands of the city clerk was used to pay the fines.

Complaints from the other renters in the block brought about the arrest. Patrolman Junk said the two women came here recently from Muncie and took the rooms.

The Other Cases.

Jack Haley was fined $1 and costs for vagrancy and Roy Hoover was let go.

John Hogan, one of the vags arrested in a Nickel Plate box car, said he could make $10 a day selling coat hangers which he made himself, but the judge could not understand how a man with an earning capacity of $3,000 a year didn't have enough to pay for a bed so he sent him over for twenty days. His companion got fifteen days.

KIEWICZ FAMILY TROUBLES FIXED

THE COURT CASES

Theodore Kiewicz has concluded that he does not want a divorce from Leokadyia Kiewicz and a suit he instituted in the superior court several days ago has been dismissed. Some time ago he was arrested at teh instance of his wife because he threatened to use the same means of disposing of her as were employed by James Nolan. He was fined and then she went after him with surety of the peace proceedings and he spent a few days in jail.

To get even he had her arrested on an affidavit charging public intoxication and then filed a divorce suit.

Suit Not on Dockets.

Suit to reclaim Noel street was not filed in any of the courts today and property owners took no action to prevent the Pennsylvania company from filling up the dead end in the work of track elevation.

The street runs along the north side of the company's right of way between Rockhill and Union streets and has been a public thoroughfare many years, but the company says it owns the property and is using it.

Wives Sue for Divorces.

Pauline A. Kelsey says that in addition to getting drunk and forcing her to earn her own living, Walter Kelsey hit her over the head with a fish bowl one time and was sent to jail for it. She also charges that he beat her on other occasions and she wants a decree. William Fruechtenich filed the suit.

Clara R. Wendt charges in her divorce complaint that Julius Wendt abandoned her and their two children for another woman. She was left without means of support and is seeking a decree. Colerick and Hogan represent her.

In the superior court Anna H. Lannert was granted a separation from John Lannert and given the custody of their two children with $12 a month for support.

THE DEATHS.

JOHNSON.

Mrs. Ann Johnson, widow of the late Frank Johnson, a pioneer resident of Milan township, Allen county, died Wednesday evening at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Bernard Solan, in Scio, Ohio, where she had been visiting for several months, at the age of 67 years. The deceased was born in Milan township in 1844, and lived there all her life. Previous to her marriage she was Miss Milliman. She was a devout member of the Methodist church and was an active church worker and noted for her kind and charitable acts. She had many friends throughout the county and in Fort Wayne. She is survived by one brother, Stuart Milliman, of Milan township, and two sisters, Mrs. Robert Sherman, of Lorain, Ohio, and Mrs. Albert Chester, of Denver, Col.

The remains will be brought to this city, arriving here over the G. R. & I. at 8:40 o'clock Friday morning, and will be taken to the home of her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Gillett, 822 Lake avenue.

BURGER.

Joseph A. Burger, aged 45 years, of 1212 Delta boulevard, died at 6:45 o'clock Wednesday evening at St. Joseph's hospital. Death was due to appendicitis following an illness of one week's duration. The deceased was employed as foreman at the Wayne hotel barber shop, and had a wide circle of friends in the city and among the traveling public. He was formerly employed at the old Aveline shop. He is survived by a widow and one son, George Burger, of Peru, and a stepdaughter, Mrs. F. C. Crawford, of this city. He was a member of the local Barbers' union No. 70.

FUNERAL NOTICES.

Perriguey.—Funeral services for Julian E. Perriguey will be held Saturday morning at 8:30 o'clock at the residence, 612 Sturgis street, thence to the Cathedral at 9 o'clock. Interment at the Catholic cemetery.

Hormann.—Funeral services for George Hormann will be held Friday afternoon at 12:30 o'clock from the residence, 2320 New Haven avenue, and at 3 o'clock from the St. Peter's Lutheran church at Car Creek, Rev. August Lange officiating.

DENIAL FROM CHAS. P. TAFT.

Washington, July 27.—A cablegram from Chas. P. Taft denying that he was interested in Alaska or in Controller Bay and declaring that he never asked the president for any favors for Richard S. Ryan, was made public at the white house today. It reads as follows:

"The President, White House, Washington: Have just returned from motortrip to Cornwall and Devon and find your cable. I may have met Ryan casually, but I do not remember him. I know nothing about the Controller Railway and Navigation company. I have never had any interest, direct or indirect, in that company or any other company doing business in Alaska. I am not interested in any lands in Alaska. I never applied to you orally or in writing to give a hearing in such case or grant such privileges. I never knew of the existence of the Controller Railway and Navigation company until I received your dispatch."

RUSS SEIZES JAP SEALER.

Victoria, B. C., July 27.—Advices from the far east report the seizure of the Japanese sealer Kofuji Maru by a Russian patrol cruiser off the Kommandorofski or Copper Island rookeries. The seizure of the schooner has aroused a storm of protest in Japan. Shortly before it took place Russia gave notice to Japan of an extension of the limits of territorial waters and the Japanese claim that the schooner was on the high seas outside the proper limit when seized.

CAR AND AUTO MIX TWO ARE INJURED

Collision Hurls the Occupants of Tonneau to Pavement.

ONE IS IN HOSPITAL

Two persons were injured, one of them seriously, when an automobile driven by Oliver Edwards, of 1923 Hoagland avenue, was struck by a South Wayne city car in charge of Motorman Ezely and Conductor Flickinger, at the corner of Calhoun and Williams streets, about 9 o'clock Wednesday evening. Mrs. Mary Colchin, of Decatur, an aunt of Mr. Edwards, and his wife were seated in the tonneau of the automobile, and the car struck the machine broadside, throwing them out on the pavement. Mrs. Colchin sustained a double fracture of the right collar bone, a fractured right rib, a dislocation of the lower jaw bone, a punctured wound under the right ear, and numerous bruises on her arms and shoulders. Mrs. Edwards sustained only a few slight bruises to her face, while Mr. Edwards escaped practically uninjured. They were removed to the office of Dr. I. E. Morris, and from there Mrs. Colchin was removed to St. Joseph's hospital, while Mr. and Mrs. Edwards returned to their home.

Mrs. Colchin rested easily last night despite her injuries, and was reported by the hospital authorities to be doing well today.

The fender and running board were torn from the automobile by the collision and the fender of the car damaged. An investigation will be held by officers of the company to ascertain who is responsible for the accident.

Marshall. There were present besides the governor Judge Frank M. Powers, Fred W. Sims and C. C. Matson, associates of Mr. Link on the tax board; W. C. Geake, of Fort Wayne; Hon. J. D. Leighty, of St. Joe; Judge Andrew A. Adams, of the Indiana appellate court, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. McIntyre, of Auburn, and Mrs. Freese, of Chicago. The luncheon was a well appointed affair and was much enjoyed by those whom it gave an opportunity to meet Governor Marshall.

Crowd is Immense.

The crowd is immense and Auburn has had a hard time trying to feed her guests. The town streets are a jammed mass of people, all good natured enough, but all evidently hungry and wondering what they were going to do about it. Thousands were fed and it is doubtful if Auburn will have enough spare provisions by night to take care of her own after the great day shall have ended.

Governor in Waterloo.

Governor Marshall did not remain in Fort Wayne Wednesday night as was reported. He went to Waterloo, where he was the guest of Dr. Frank M. Broughton over night and he came over to Auburn this morning in an automobile with his host. This quiet change of plans caused some confusion to the reception committee, which was not looking for the governor from that direction nor at that time and he was not "received" according to the program mapped out.

The Court House Site.

The Masonic ceremonies were held at the northeast corner of the new building, where the cornerstone is located, and assisting the lodges were members from Fort Wayne and other cities, with Samuel F. Davenport, of this city, as worshipful master. The speaking exercises, with Hon. J. D. Leighty as chairman, were from the band stand, now located at the northwest corner of the court house square.

The site of the new court house is on that of the old one, it being in the city's business center. It is a splendid location for a public building. The entire city square is used by the county for its court house and the combination jail building and sheriff's residence. The four principal streets of the city bound it, and on three sides it faces business buildings. On the east, across Cedar street, stands the city buildings and the Henry Opera house. The T. & C. interurban runs along Cedar street.

At the southwest corner of the square is the soldiers' monument, and on the northwest corner a large and beautiful fountain. The new court house will stand near to the center of the square and there will be wide lawns on every side, especially toward the west, facing Main street, the principal business street of the city.

With the wide streets surrounding it and thickly covered with shade trees, Auburn's public square has long been considered one of the finest to be found anywhere.

Was There in 1864.

Among the visitors at today's ceremonies was Prof. Fred W. Reineke, the widely known Fort Wayne musician. Prof. Reineke was here at the laying of the cornerstone of the old court house, just demolished, when that ceremony took place in 1863. He was a member at that time of Prof. Strube's famous Fort Wayne band, which was engaged to furnish the music for the ceremonies back in war days. Mr. Reineke thought he would come up and seen the cornerstone of the new building layed, but adds that he does not expect to attend another similar event here. He was requested to celebrate the occasion by playing in one of the bands here today.

Preparations Complete.

The preparations of the DeKalb county officials and of the people of Auburn for the ceremony today were complete and the affair has passed without mishap or confusion. The crowd has exceeded expectations, though a great concourse was looked for.

HOLSTLAW'S SON IN LORIMER CASE

Repeats Tale That Father Received Bribe for His Vote.

HARD FOR WITNESS

Washington, July 27.—The task of finding out if money was "raised" to elect Wm. Lorimer to the senate was supplanted today at the senate Lorimer committee hearing by the task of ascertaining if mony was "expended" for that purpose. Herschell D. Holstlaw, son of Senator D. W. Holstlaw, who confessed that the latter received $2,500 after being told that he would be paid that sum if he voted for Lorimer, was examined, the father being too ill to appear. An effort was made through the son to substantiate the truth of that confession. Counsel for Lorimer had not completed the cross examination when the committee took an unusually long recess, until 3 p. m., in order to be present when the senate voted on the wool schedules.

Attorney Hanecy, representing Lorimer insisted Holstlaw tell "if any other charges had been brought against his father. Holstlaw indignantly appealed to the committee against the course of examination. The committee ruled he should answer.

Charges of Cruelty.

The attorney then asked about charges of stringing a boy up by the thumbs to make him confess to stealing money, about matters connected with the purchase of a tombstone for the witness's grandfather and other things. The son denied that his father had anything to do with some of the transactions and in regard to others he defended his father's actions as entirely proper.

"Father told my mother, my sister and myself that his confession was the absolute truth," said the witness. Discussing his father's demeanor before the confession, the witness said that his father had been away a month attending a Baptist convention in Baltimore, Md.

BAILEY KICKS OUT.

Washington, July 27.—Because he does not believe in the senate's method of taking testimony in investigations Senator Bailey today resigned from the committee on privileges and elections. He made no explanation to the senate and the resignation was accepted without comment.

To his friends Mr. Bailey said afterward that he could not consent to enter upon the work required in the investigation of the charges against Senator Stephenson.

"I have been appointed on the subcommittee to consider the Stephenson case," he said. "My conviction is that the strict rules of evidence should control in all such inquiries. The senate does not observe such rules, but admits all kinds of matter. I cannot see my way clear to decide a case of such magnitude on such a basis and therefore have tendered my resignation as a member of the committee."

the land would be thrown open to entry gave Ryan what he wanted. It cut off all chance for any competitior to locate on the terminal lands until after Ryan had made his selection. No amount of newspaper notice to the country after the executive order was signed could in any respect interfere with the prearranged work of Ryan's agents or enable any rival to enter a foot of land on Controller Bay except what was not wanted by the people whom Ryan represented. If the order had been wholly secret the effect could not have been different.

"It is possible that the protests already made may yet save the situation But in any case it is unfortunate that the friends of conservation, in their efforts to bring about the development of Alaska for the benefit of the people, are continually obliged to expend their strength against the men who ought to be the protectors of the people's property. It looks to me like unnecessary duplication of work when we must first fight the policeman before we can get a chance to stop the looting."

Was a Solemn Warning.

"The facts developed by this investigation constituted a solemn warning and a call upon the executive for special watchfulness in protecting public property in Alaska," says the statement. "As with the coal lands the title to the harbor lands, which are the key to the coal lands, should be held in any event until congress could act.

"The president is right when he says what Alaska needs is development, but no legitimate development of the harbor front on Controller Bay has been and can be proposed that could not proceed as well and rapidly under suitable lease on government land as on private land.

"So long as these terminal lands remained in government ownership no one could monopolize the harbors. The moment any of them passed into private hands the danger of monopoly began.

A Salient Fact.

"The fact remains and the public will not forget before the executive order of Oct. 28, Controller Bay was both available for development and safe against monopoly. Now it is no longer safe. This is abundantly proved not only by the general history of commercial consolidation but in particular by what a Morgan-Guggenheim syndicate has already done in destroying and absorbing possible competitors. The president denies that in granting Ryan's request for the opening of Controller Bay by the executive order of Oct. 28 there was any element of secrecy, and quotes a press dispatch of the same date announcing his action. But Mr. Taft does not mention that on the day he signed the order and notified the press in Washington, Ryan's surveying party was already in Alaska and that by Nov. 1, or four days after the order was made and before the government officials in Alaska had been notified of the order, they had begun a survey of the Ryan claims on Controller Bay.

JOHN M'NAMARA CONFIDENT.

Alleged Dynamiter Declines to Talk About McManigal.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 27.—"Oh, what's the use to be a knocker?" asked John J. McNamara, when asked yesterday what he thought of Ortie McManigal, who is alleged to have confessed concerning a plot to blow up the Los Angeles Times, in connection with which McNamara and his brother James are charged with murder. This is the first interview granted John McNamara since his arrival from the east and incarceration here April 28.

"I am confident of the outcome of the trial," he said.

"Perhaps this accounts for my gaining in weight. I hope the trial of myself and my brother will be confined to the court room, which is the proper place for it."

METEOROLOGICAL.

SUMMARY OF WEATHER CONDITIONS.

Local Office, Weather Bureau, Fort Wayne, Ind., July 27.—While unreasonably cool weather continues to be general east of the Mississippi, decidedly warmer weather is reported from the states between the Mississippi and the Rockies, some temperatures above 90 degrees being recorded over Nebraska, Montana and the Dakotas yesterday; over practically all of the lake region and Ohio valley temperatures remained below 75 degrees yesterday. Fair weather is general from the Mississippi to the Atlantic, but a moderate storm, which is central over the Dakotas this morning and is spreading southeastward, is giving some scattered showers between the Mississippi and the Rockies; this storm will give increasing cloudiness in this section Friday with probably showers by Friday afternoon or night; it will continue fair tonight and somewhat warmer.

Huntington Officers Enforce Traffic Ordinance Passed Two Years Ago.

Huntington, Ind., July 27.—"Keep to the right!" This is the order called out by local police officers now to bicycle riders, automobilists and others who persist in using the left instead of the right side of the street. The action of the police authorities comes as the result of the mandate of the council to the effect that the traffic ordinance passed by the councilmanic body in 1909 should be enforced. The measure is intended to prevent accidents and blockade of streets.

Police Chief Baker stated that some time would be required to "educate the people" to the adoption of the ordinance. A number of people in buggies and drivers of automobiles were halted and ordered to proceed to the right side of the street today. "I will merely order the people to comply with the ordinance for a short time and later make arrests." The penalty provided is a sum not to exceed $100.

Those halted now are inclined to let their angry passions arise, deeming the act of the police an imposition. When they see that the custodians of the law mean to enforce the ordinance no matter what the cost, they will come to the conclusion that it will be best to reconcile themselves to the new order of things.

Automobilists and others stopped seemed astonished. They wanted to know what was up. The policeman soon put them next.

ROMANCE HAD QUEER START.

Kendallville Man Weds—Answered Address in Shirt.

Kendallville, Ind., July 27.—The culmination of a happy romance existing for over a year was reached last Wednesday when Miss Louise Dirster, of Locustdale, Pa., and John E. Russell, of this city, were quietly wedded at the home of the bride.

Over a year ago the groom purchased a shirt in this city and incidentally found an address in the pocket of the garment. Little did he think at the time he mailed a letter to the young lady, simply through curiosity, that she was to become his bride, but curious to know just what results would be, he wrote to the young lady who in turn answered the missive. This was the beginning of the end and through personal communications the couple learned to know each other.

SURPRISES HIS BROTHER.

South Whitley, Ind., July 27.—After having been mourned as dead for the last fifteen years, William E. Emerson, of Springfield, Ill., walked into the local bank and gave his brother, Robert Emerson, the surprise of his life Tuesday evening. William Emerson left this town nearly twenty years ago and none of his relatives knew his whereabouts, the supposition being that he was dead.

ACROBATS BREAK CAMP.

Kendallville, Ind., July 27.—George Belford and his acrobatic troupe, who have been spending the summer at Long lake north of the city, broke camp Tuesday and will visit in Kendallville several days before resuming their work on the road for the fall and winter season.

FRATERNITY DAY A CITY HOLIDAY

One Day of Chautauqua Set Aside for Lodge Members to Celebrate.

Defiance, O., July 27.—Fraternity day, Friday, August 4, will be observed as a holiday for the whole city if the expectations of the committee which met Tuesday evening at the Watkins Bros.' office are realized. On previous Fraternity days the business houses of Defiance have closed during the afternoon, and it is believed that the same will be done this year. The program, although not completed, will consist of the usual entertaining variety of sports, with a baseball game between the Defiance college nine and a local team as a special feature. Of course, the real big event will be the aeroplane flights. This will be the first occasion that a heavier than air machine has been seen in Defiance, and thousands will come for this exhibition alone. The auditorium attractions will be among the best of the course.

Fraternity day is given over especially to the fraternal organizations of the city, and practically every lodge in the city is represented in the movement. Heretofore Fraternity day has brought the largest crowds of the Chautauqua, and this year will not be an exception.

SKULL CRUSHED BY WHEELS.

Thresher Meets Tragic Death Tuesday Afternoon.

Bluffton, Ind., July 27.—Dustin Sater, aged 29, single, met death Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock while at work upon the Jacob Ayres farm, near Greentown, as one of a threshing crew of thirty members, known as the Kelley crew.

Sater was riving a wagon loaded with oats and, coming down a small incline inthe field, the stanchion of the wagon broke and he pitched forward fromthe load. He fell beneath the horses' feet and under the wheels of the wagon, which passed over his skull, crushing it in as if beaten by a heavy stick.

Sater lived about ten minutes after the accident. The injured man expired just as Dr. Powell, of Greentown, entered the bed room into which he had been carried.

The accident occurred in a field of the Jacob Ayres farm, which is situated directly across the road from the space in which the engine and threshing outfit stood. Sater was not immediately near any of the threshing crew at the time, but close enough that the accident was observed by some of the members of the crew, and it seemed but a moment until all were at his side.

BLUFFTON RESIDENCE BURNS.

Origin of Fire Remains a Mystery—An Investigation to Be Made.

Bluffton, Ind., July 27.—The residence of Mrs. Daniel Hunter, at the extreme west end of Wiley avenue in this city, was burned to the ground about 1:30 o'clock yesterday morning. Mrs. Hunter and children were asleep in the home when the cracking of the burning timbers awakened them. They were unable to recover anything from the house with the exception of a small quantity of wearing apparel.

The origination of the blaze is unknown and probably will remain a mystery. Neighbors delayed sending in the alarm and when thedepartment arrived on the scene the house was in ashes, making it useless to even throw any water.

The residence is owned by William Pugh and is partly covered by insurance. Mrs. Hunter's loss is fully covered, she carrying $400 insurance.

An effort will probably be made to learn the cause of the fire, several people thinking that it was of incendiary origin.

BIG DAY AT WINONA.

Warsaw, Ind., July 27.—Wednesday was one of the big days at Winona, more than 3,000 excursionists having come to spend the day and to hear the American band of Providence. An excursion from Cass county, which came by way of Plymouth, brought 1,364 people. Two sections of ten cars each were needed to carry this crowd. An excursion from Plymouth added 410 to the list. The Big Four run two excursions from the south, the first from Wabash and North Manchester, bringing in 602 people, and the second from Greensburg, bringing 375. Besides this many came in over the Winona interurban line.

ROWDYISM AT CARNIVAL.

Hartford City, Ind., July 27.—Special officers policing the carnival grounds at this city have been given instructions to arrest all persons engaging in rowdyism. The edict comes from the Eagles' committee to whom complaint was made of the action of boys and young men striking carnival visitors with riding whips. The whips are sold at one of the various stands. Many persons felt the sting of a whip Tuesday night, one little girl being struck such a forcible blow on the arm that the flesh was cut.

PEARL HUNTING IN WABASH.

Bluffton, Ind., July 27.—Pearl hunting is again all the rage with a crowd of young men in this city, and nearly every day several of the searchers can be seen wading around in the Wabash river, a short distance east of the city. From reports in the past few days the hunters are meeting with great success and have landed several valuable jewels. Jay Markley, an employe of the King Piano factory, is probably the most successful, he having found several in the past few days.

JUST A SIMPLE WHITE DRESS

It is not the idea of the WHITE DRESS PARADE to wear a silken or expensive gown. Just the simple white dress which you already have, that is all that is necessary to make you a participant in the fete at Robison Park on WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 2ND. Do not wear a hat, as it may detract from the white dress rather than add to its effectiveness. What young lady's eyes would not sparkle with delight and joy if she found herself the possessor of a diamond ring like her grown up sister wears? The young miss appearing in the WHITE DRESS PARADE, whose costume and grace of manner the judges think most worthy of the title will be chosen Queen and will receive just such a diamond ring as her heart desires. Three Maids of Honor will also receive diamond rings, real cut stones, not so large as that given to the Queen, but large enough to thrill their little hearts. If you wish to enter the parade just drop a postal to Mr. Williams, Manager Robison Park with your name and addresss.

TOOK A QUARTER TO POOR FAMILY

Julius Howenstein Liberal After Return from a Trip.

CITY COURT DOCKET

When Julius Howenstein returned from a trip of three or four weeks he took to his poor family a quarter to provide food for it and expected the household would be able to subsist on the two bits, but Judge Mungovan has some ideas of his own about how a man ought to support his wife and children so he sent the prisoner from the city court to the jail this morning with a fine of $10 and a sentence of thirty days to give him time to think over a lecture he added.

Howenstein was told that when he gets out he must go to work and earn money to support the family unless he wants to spend a longer term in jail. Humane Officer Schlaudroff said that last winter he found Howenstein hugged up close to a saloon stove while his family at home had neither fire or fuel. He had a dollar in his pocket and the officer made him go home and buy coal with it. It is also charged that he devotes too much of his time to another woman.

Wilkins Is Let Go.

William Wilkins, held until the police could make an investigation of the Snug saloon, was let go under an indefinite continuance of the charge of public intoxication against him.

No affidavit was filed against Marion Wyatt, the proprietor, but Chief of Police Abbott stated today that he will file a remonstrance against a renewal of the license, which will expire next Monday.

Insulted Two Women.

Bill Farnan was sent over for twenty days on a charge of assault and battery. He insulted two women on the street and when Louis Doenges advised them to report the matter to an officer Farnan hit him. He is 19 years old and said he bought drinks in a Columbia street saloon, but when the prosecuter went after him to get at the bottom he hedged and said his brother bought beer in a bottle and gave it to him.

Raided the Block.

A raid on rooms 31 and 32 of the Pixley-Long block on Berry street resulted in the arrest of two couples who gave assumed names and put up bonds. Each was fined $15 and costs and the hundred dollars in the hands of the city clerk was used to pay the fines.

Complaints from the other renters in the block brought about the arrest. Patrolman Junk said the two women came here recently from Muncie and took the rooms.

The Other Cases.

Jack Haley was fined $1 and costs for vagrancy and Roy Hoover was let go.

John Hogan, one of the vags arrested in a Nickel Plate box car, said he could make $10 a day selling coat hangers which he made himself, but the judge could not understand how a man with an earning capacity of $3,000 a year didn't have enough to pay for a bed so he sent him over for twenty days. His companion got fifteen days.

KIEWICZ FAMILY TROUBLES FIXED

THE COURT CASES

Theodore Kiewicz has concluded that he does not want a divorce from Leokadyia Kiewicz and a suit he instituted in the superior court several days ago has been dismissed. Some time ago he was arrested at teh instance of his wife because he threatened to use the same means of disposing of her as were employed by James Nolan. He was fined and then she went after him with surety of the peace proceedings and he spent a few days in jail.

To get even he had her arrested on an affidavit charging public intoxication and then filed a divorce suit.

Suit Not on Dockets.

Suit to reclaim Noel street was not filed in any of the courts today and property owners took no action to prevent the Pennsylvania company from filling up the dead end in the work of track elevation.

The street runs along the north side of the company's right of way between Rockhill and Union streets and has been a public thoroughfare many years, but the company says it owns the property and is using it.

Wives Sue for Divorces.

Pauline A. Kelsey says that in addition to getting drunk and forcing her to earn her own living, Walter Kelsey hit her over the head with a fish bowl one time and was sent to jail for it. She also charges that he beat her on other occasions and she wants a decree. William Fruechtenich filed the suit.

Clara B. Wendt charges in her divorce complaint that Julius Wendt abandoned her and their two children for another woman. She was left without means of support and is seeking a decree. Culerick and Hogan represent her.

In the superior court Anna H. Lannert was granted a separation from John Lannert and given the custody of their two children with $12 a month for support.

THE DEATHS.

JOHNSON.

Mrs. Ann Johnson, widow of the late Frank Johnson, a pioneer resident of Milan township, Allen county, died Wednesday evening at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Bernard Solan, in Scio, Ohio, where she had been visiting for several months, at the age of 67 years. The deceased was born in Milan township in 1844, and lived there all her life. Previous to her marriage she was Miss Milliman. She was a devout member of the Methodist church and was an active church worker and noted for her kind and charitable acts. She had many friends throughout the county and in Fort Wayne. She is survived by one brother, Stuart Milliman, of Milan township, and two sisters, Mrs. Robert Sherman, of Lorain, Ohio, and Mrs. Albert Chester, of Denver, Col.

The remains will be brought to this city, arriving here over the G. R. & I. at 8:40 o'clock Friday morning, and will be taken to the home of her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Gillett, 822 Lake avenue.

BURGER.

Joseph A. Burger, aged 45 years, of 1212 Delta boulevard, died at 6:45 o'clock Wednesday evening at St. Joseph's hospital. Death was due to appendicitis following an illness of one week's duration. The deceased was employed as foreman at the Wayne hotel barber shop, and had a wide circle of friends in the city and among the traveling public. He was formerly employed at the old Aveline shop. He is survived by a widow and one son, George Burger, of Peru, and a stepdaughter, Mrs. F. C. Crawford, of this city. He was a member of the local Barbers' union No. 70.

FUNERAL NOTICES.

Perriguey.—Funeral services for Julian E. Perriguey will be held Saturday morning at 8:30 o'clock at the residence, 612 Sturgis street, thence to the Cathedral at 9 o'clock. Interment at the Catholic cemetery.

Hormann.—Funeral services for George Hormann will be held Friday afternoon at 12:30 o'clock from the residence, 2320 New Haven avenue, and at 2 o'clock from the St. Peter's Lutheran church at Gar Creek, Rev. August Lange officiating.

DENIAL FROM CHAS. P. TAFT.

Washington, July 27.—A cablegram from Chas. P. Taft denying that he was interested in Alaska or in Controller Bay and declaring that he never asked the president for any favors for Richard S. Ryan, was made public at the white house today. It reads as follows:

"The President, White House, Washington: Have just returned from motortrip to Cornwall and Devon and find your cable. I may have met Ryan casually, but I do not remember him. I know nothing about the Controller Railway and Navigation company. I have never had any interest, direct or indirect, in that company or any other company doing business in Alaska. I am not interested in any lands in Alaska. I never applied to you orally or in writing to give a hearing in such case or grant such privileges. I never knew of the existence of the Controller Railway and Navigation company until I received your dispatch."

RUSS SEIZES JAP SEALER.

Victoria, B. C., July 27.—Advices from the far east report the seizure of the Japanese sealer Kofuji Maru by a Russian patrol cruiser off the Kommandorofski or Copper Island rookeries. The seizure of the schooner has aroused a storm of protest in Japan. Shortly before it took place Russia gave notice to Japan of an extension of the limits of territorial waters and the Japanese claim that the schooner was on the high seas outside the proper limit when seized.

CAR AND AUTO MIX TWO ARE INJURED

Collision Hurls the Occupants of Tonneau to Pavement.

ONE IS IN HOSPITAL

Two persons were injured, one of them seriously, when an automobile driven by Oliver Edwards, of 1925 Hoagland avenue, was struck by a South Wayne city car in charge of Motorman Ezely and Conductor Flickinger, at the corner of Calhoun and Williams streets, about 9 o'clock Wednesday evening. Mrs. Mary Colchin, of Decatur, an aunt of Mr. Edwards, and his wife were seated in the tonneau of the automobile, and the car struck the machine broadside, throwing them out on the pavement. Mrs. Colchin sustained a double fracture of the right collar bone, a fractured right rib, a dislocation of the lower jaw bone, a punctured wound under the right ear, and numerous bruises on her arms and shoulders. Mrs. Edwards sustained only a few slight bruises to her face, while Mr. Edwards escaped practically uninjured. They were removed to the office of Dr. I. E. Morris, and from there Mrs. Colchin was removed to St. Joseph's hospital, while Mr. and Mrs. Edwards returned to their home.

Mrs. Colchin rested easily last night despite her injuries, and was reported by the hospital authorities to be doing well today.

The fender and running board were torn from the automobile by the collision and the fender of the car damaged. An investigation will be held by officers of the company to ascertain who is responsible for the accident.

Marshall. There were present besides the governor Judge Frank M. Powers, Fred W. Sims and C. C. Matson, associates of Mr. Link on the tax board; W. C. Benke, of Fort Wayne; Hon. J. D. Leighty, of St. Joe; Judge Andrew A. Adams, of the Indiana appellate court, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. McIntyre, of Auburn, and Mrs. Freese, of Chicago. The luncheon was a well appointed affair and was much enjoyed by those whom it gave an opportunity to meet Governor Marshall.

Crowd is Immense.

The crowd is immense and Auburn has had a hard time trying to feed her guests. The town streets are a jammed mass of people, all good natured enough, but all evidently hungry and wondering what they were going to do about it. Thousands were fed and it is doubtful if Auburn will have enough spare provisions by night to take care of her own after the great day shall have ended.

Governor in Waterloo.

Governor Marshall did not remain in Fort Wayne Wednesday night as was reported. He went to Waterloo, where he was the guest of Dr. Frank M. Broughton over night and he came over to Auburn this morning in an automobile with his host. This quiet change of plans caused some confusion to the reception committee, which was not looking for the governor from that direction nor at that time and he was not "received" according to the program mapped out.

The Court House Site.

The Masonic ceremonies were held at the northeast corner of the new building, where the cornerstone is located, and assisting the lodges were members from Fort Wayne and other cities, with Samuel F. Davenport, of this city, as worshipful master. The speaking exercises, with Hon. J. D. Leighty as chairman, were from the band stand, now located at the northwest corner of the court house square.

The site of the new court house is on that of the old one, it being in the city's business center. It is a splendid location for a public building. The entire city square is used by the county for its court house and the combination jail building and sheriff's residence. The four principal streets of the city bound it, and on three sides it faces business buildings. On the east, across Cedar street, stands the city buildings and the Henry Opera house. The T. & C. interurban runs along Cedar street.

At the southwest corner of the square is the soldiers' monument, and on the northwest corner a large and beautiful fountain. The new court house will stand near to the center of the square and there will be wide lawns on every side, especially toward the west, facing Main street, the principal business street of the city.

With the wide streets surrounding it and thickly covered with shade trees, Auburn's public square has long been considered one of the finest to be found anywhere.

Was There in 1864.

Among the visitors at today's ceremonies was Prof. Fred W. Reineke, the widely known Fort Wayne musician. Prof. Reineke was here at the laying of the cornerstone of the old court house, just demolished, when that ceremony took place in 1863. He was a member at that time of Prof. Strube's famous Fort Wayne band, which was engaged to furnish the music for the ceremonies back in war days. Mr. Reineke thought he would come up and seen the cornerstone of the new building layed, but adds that he does not expect to attend another similar event here. He was requested to celebrate the occasion by playing in one of the bands here today.

Preparations Complete.

The preparations of the DeKalb county officials and of the people of Auburn for the ceremony today were complete and the affair has passed without mishap or confusion. The crowd has exceeded expectations, though a great concourse was looked for.

HOLSTLAW'S SON IN LORIMER CASE

HARD FOR WITNESS

Washington, July 27.—The task of finding out if money was "raised" to elect Wm. Lorimer to the senate was supplanted today at the senate Lorimer committee hearing by the task of ascertaining if mony was "expended" for that purpose. Herschell D. Holstlaw, son of Senator D. W. Holstlaw, who confessed that the latter received $2,500 after being told that he would be paid that sum if he voted for Lorimer, was examined, the father being too ill to appear. An effort was made through the son to substantiate the truth of that confession. Counsel for Lorimer had not completed the cross examination when the committee took an unusually long recess, until 3 p. m., in order to be present when the senate voted on the wool schedules.

Attorney Haney, representing Lorimer insisted Holstlaw tell "if any other charges had been brought against his father. Holstlaw indignantly appealed to the committee against the course of examination. The committee ruled he should answer.

Charges of Cruelty.

The attorney then asked about charges of stringing a boy up by the thumbs to make him confess to stealing money, about matters connected with the purchase of a tombstone for the witness's grandfather and other things. The son denied that his father had anything to do with some of the transactions and in regard to others he defended his father's actions as entirely proper.

"Father told my mother, my sister and myself that his confession was the absolute truth," said the witness. Discussing his father's demeanor before the confession, the witness said that his father had been away a month attending a Baptist convention in Baltimore, Md.

BAILEY KICKS OUT.

Washington, July 27.—Because he does not believe in the senate's method of taking testimony in investigations Senator Bailey today resigned from the committee on privileges and elections. He made no explanation to the senate and the resignation was accepted without comment.

To his friends Mr. Bailey said afterward that he could not consent to enter upon the work required in the investigation of the charges against Senator Stephenson.

"I have been appointed on the subcommittee to consider the Stephenson case," he said. "My conviction is that the strict rules of evidence should control in all such inquiries. The senate does not observe such rules. But admits all kinds of matter. I cannot see my way clear to decide a case of such magnitude on such a basis and therefore have tendered my resignation as a member of the committee."

the land would be thrown open to entry gave Ryan what he wanted. It cut off all chance for any competitor to locate on the terminal lands until after Ryan had made his selection. No amount of newspaper notice to the country after the executive order was signed could in any respect interfere with the prearranged work of Ryan's agents or enable any rival to enter a foot of land on Controller Bay except what was not wanted by the people whom Ryan represented. If the order had been wholly secret the effect could not have been different.

"It is possible that the protests already made may yet save the situation But in any case it is unfortunate that the friends of conservation, in their efforts to bring about the development of Alaska for the benefit of the people, are continually obliged to expend their strength against the men who ought to be the protectors of the people's property. It looks to me like unnecessary duplication of work when we must first fight the policeman before we can get a chance to stop the looting."

Was a Solemn Warning.

"The facts developed by this investigation constituted a solemn warning and a call upon the executive for special watchfulness in protecting public property in Alaska," says the statement. "As with the coal lands the title to the harbor lands, which are the key to the coal lands, should be held in any event until congress could act.

"The president is right when he says what Alaska needs is development, but no legitimate development of the harbor front on Controller Bay has been and can be proposed that could not proceed as well and rapidly under suitable lease on government land as on private land.

"So long as these terminal lands remained in government ownership no one could monopolize the harbors. The moment any of them passed into private hands the danger of monopoly began.

A Salient Fact.

"The fact remains and the public will not forget before the executive order of Oct. 28, Controller Bay was both available for development and safe against monopoly. Now it is no longer safe. This is abundantly proved not only by the general history of commercial consolidation but in particular by what a Morgan-Guggenheim syndicate has already done in destroying and absorbing possible competitors. The president denies that in granting Ryan's request for the opening of Controller Bay by the executive order of Oct. 28 there was any element of secrecy, and quotes a press dispatch of the same date announcing his action. But Mr. Taft does not mention that on the day he signed the order and notified the press in Washington, Ryan's surveying party was already in Alaska and that by Nov. 1, or four days after the order was made and before the government officials in Alaska had been notified of the order, they had begun a survey of the Ryan claims on Controller Bay.

JOHN M'NAMARA CONFIDENT.

Alleged Dynamiter Declines to Talk About McManigal.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 27.—"Oh, what's the use to be a knocker?" asked John J. McNamara, when asked yesterday what he thought of Ortie McManigal, who is alleged to have confessed concerning a plot to blow up the Los Angeles Times, in connection with which McNamara and his brother James are charged with murder. This is the first interview granted John McNamara since his arrival from the east and incarceration here April 26.

"I am confident of the outcome of the trial," he said.

"Perhaps this accounts for my gaining in weight. I hope the trial of myself and my brother will be confined to the court room, which is the proper place for it."

SUMMARY OF WEATHER CONDITIONS.

Local Office, Weather Bureau, Fort Wayne, Ind., July 27.—While unreasonably cool weather continues to be general east of the Mississippi, decidedly warmer weather is reported from the states between the Mississippi and the Rockies, some temperatures above 90 degrees being recorded over Nebraska, Montana and the Dakotas yesterday; over practically all of the lake region and Ohio valley temperatures remained below 75 degrees yesterday. Fair weather is general from the Mississippi to the Atlantic, but a moderate storm, which is central over the Dakotas this morning and is spreading southeastward, is giving some scattered showers between the Mississippi and the Rockies; this storm will give increasing cloudiness in this section Friday with probably showers by Friday afternoon or night; it will continue fair tonight and somewhat warmer.

NEWS OF FORT WAYNE'S NEIGHBORS

FOLLOWS EXAMPLE SET BY NEIGHBOR

Huntington Officers Enforce Traffic Ordinance Passed Two Years Ago.

Huntington, Ind., July 27.—"Keep to the right!" This is the order called out by local police officers now to bicycle riders, automobilists and others who persist in using the left instead of the right side of the street. The action of the police authorities comes as the result of the mandate of the council to the effect that the traffic ordinance passed by the councilmanic body in 1909 should be enforced. The measure is intended to prevent accidents and blockade of streets.

Police Chief Baker stated that some time would be required to "educate the people" to the adoption of the ordinance. A number of people in buggies and drivers of automobiles were halted and ordered to proceed to the right side of the street today. "I will merely order the people to comply with the ordinance for a short time and later make arrests." The penalty provided is a sum not to exceed $100.

Those halted now are inclined to let their angry passions arise, deeming the act of the police an imposition. When they see that the custodians of the law mean to enforce the ordinance no matter what the cost, they will come to the conclusion that it will be best to reconcile themselves to the new order of things.

Automobilists and others stopped seemed astonished. They wanted to know what was up. The policeman soon put them next.

ROMANCE HAD QUEER START.

Kendallville Man Weds—Answered Address in Shirt.

Kendallville, Ind., July 27.—The culmination of a happy romance existing for over a year was reached last Wednesday when Miss Louise Dirster, of Locustdale, Pa., and John E. Russell, of this city, were quietly wedded at the home of the bride.

Over a year ago the groom purchased a shirt in this city and incidentally found an address in the pocket of the garment. Little did he think at the time he mailed a letter to the young lady, simply through curiosity, that she was to become his bride, but curious to know just what results would be, he wrote to the young lady who in turn answered the missive. This was the beginning of the end and through personal communications the couple learned to know each other.

SURPRISES HIS BROTHER.

South Whitley, Ind., July 27.—After having been mourned as dead for the last fifteen years, William E. Emerson, of Springfield, Ill., walked into the local bank and gave his brother, Robert Emerson, the surprise of his life Tuesday evening. William Emerson left this town nearly twenty years ago and none of his relatives knew his whereabouts, the supposition being that he was dead.

ACROBATS BREAK CAMP.

Kendallville, Ind., July 27.—George Belford and his acrobatic troupe, who have been spending the summer at Long lake north of the city, broke camp Tuesday and will visit in Kendallville several days before resuming their work on the road for the fall and winter season.

FRATERNITY DAY A CITY HOLIDAY

One Day of Chautauqua Set Aside for Lodge Members to Celebrate.

Defiance, O., July 27.—Fraternity day, Friday, August 4, will be observed as a holiday for the whole city if the expectations of the committee which met Tuesday evening at the Watkins Bros.' office are realized. On previous Fraternity days the business houses of Defiance have closed during the afternoon, and it is believed that the same will be done this year. The program, although not completed, will consist of the usual entertaining variety of sports, with a baseball game between the Defiance college nine and a local team as a special feature. Of course, the real big event will be the aeroplane flights. This will be the first occasion that a heavier than air machine has been seen in Defiance, and thousands will come for this exhibition alone. The auditorium attractions will be among the best of the course.

Fraternity day is given over especially to the fraternal organizations of the city, and practically every lodge in the city is represented in the movement. Heretofore Fraternity day has brought the largest crowds of the Chautauqua, and this year will not be an exception.

SKULL CRUSHED BY WHEELS.

Thresher Meets Tragic Death Tuesday Afternoon.

Bluffton, Ind., July 27.—Dustin Sater, aged 29, single, met death Tuesday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock while at work upon the Jacob Ayres farm, near Greentown, as one of a threshing crew of thirty members, known as the Kelley crew.

Sater was riving a wagon loaded with oats and, coming down a small incline inthe field, the stanchion of the wagon broke and he pitched forward fromthe load. He fell beneath the horses' feet and under the wheels of the wagon, which passed over his skull, crushing it in as if beaten by a heavy stick.

Sater lived about ten minutes after the accident. The injured man expired just as Dr. Powell, of Greentown, entered the bed room into which he had been carried.

The accident occurred in a field of the Jacob Ayres farm, which is situated directly across the road from the space in which the engine and threshing outfit stood. Sater was not immediately near any of the threshing crew at the time, but close enough that the accident was observed by some of the members of the crew, and it seemed but a moment until all were at his side.

BLUFFTON RESIDENCE BURNS.

Origin of Fire Remains a Mystery—An Investigation to Be Made.

Bluffton, Ind., July 27.—The residence of Mrs. Daniel Hunter, at the extreme west end of Wiley avenue in this city, was burned to the ground about 1:30 o'clock yesterday morning. Mrs. Hunter and children were asleep in the home when the cracking of the burning timbers awakened them. They were unable to recover anything from the house with the exception of a small quantity of wearing apparel.

The origination of the blaze is unknown and probably will remain a mystery. Neighbors delayed sending in the alarm and when thedepartment arrived on the scene the house was in ashes, making it useless to even throw any water.

The residence is owned by William Pugh and is partly covered by insurance. Mrs. Hunter's loss is fully covered, she carrying $400 insurance.

An effort will probably be made to learn the cause of the fire, several people thinking that it was of incendiary origin.

BIG DAY AT WINONA.

Warsaw, Ind., July 27.—Wednesday was one of the big days at Winona, more than 3,000 excursionists having come to spend the day and to hear the American band of Providence. An excursion from Cass county, which came by way of Plymouth, brought 1,364 people. Two sections of ten cars each were needed to carry this crowd. An excursion from Plymouth added 410 to the list. The Big Four run two excursions from the south, the first from Wabash and North Manchester, bringing in 602 people, and the second from Greensburg, bringing 375. Besides this many came in over the Winona interurban line.

ROWDYISM AT CARNIVAL.

Hartford City, Ind., July 27.—Special officers policing the carnival grounds at this city have been given instructions to arrest all persons engaging in rowdyism. The edict comes from the Eagles' committee to whom complaint was made of the action of boys and young men striking carnival visitors with riding whips. The whips are sold at one of the various stands. Many persons felt the sting of a whip Tuesday night, one little girl being struck such a forcible blow on the arm that the flesh was cut.

PEARL HUNTING IN WABASH.

Bluffton, Ind., July 27.—Pearl hunting is again all the rage with a crowd of young men in this city, and nearly every day several of the searchers can be seen wading around in the Wabash river, a short distance east of the city. From reports in the past few days the hunters are meeting with great success and have landed several valuable jewels. Jay Markley, an employe of the King Piano factory, is probably the most successful, he having found several in the past few days.

JUST A SIMPLE WHITE DRESS

It is not the idea of the WHITE DRESS PARADE to wear a silken or expensive gown. Just the simple white dress which you already have, that is all that is necessary to make you a participant in the fete at Robison Park on WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 2ND. Do not wear a hat, as it may detract from the white dress rather than add to its effectiveness. What young lady's eyes would not sparkle with delight and joy if she found herself the possessor of a diamond ring like her grown up sister wears? The young miss appearing in the WHITE DRESS PARADE, whose costume and grace of manner the judges think most worthy of the title will be chosen Queen and will receive just such a diamond ring as her heart desires. Three Maids of Honor will also receive diamond rings, real cut stones, not so large as that given to the Queen, but large enough to thrill their little hearts. If you wish to enter the parade just drop a postal to Mr. Williams, Manager Robison Park with your name and addresss.

DE KALB COUNTY'S GREAT DAY.

This newspaper joins with all northern Indiana today in the neighborly felicitations that are showered upon DeKalb county and her good people. The day marks another epoch in that county's history. With impressive ceremonies and the participation of the citizenship of that county the cornerstone of a new courthouse is put in place. It is to be a beautiful and costly structure and will be a stately symbol of the wealth and progress of the county.

DeKalb county has a history which spans the last three-quarters of the century. That history is more or less bound up in the history of Allen county. Their borders touch and the same class of sturdy, empire-building pioneers who with ax and plow wrought the transformation of the wilderness here settled the fertile stretches of DeKalb's soil. There has been neighborly intermingling and intercourse, political concerns have in many ways united them in common purpose and activity, in enterprise and civic impulse and distinctions have been always as they now are geographical and in no wise social. They are of us, as we are of them.

DeKalb's new courthouse will be a splendid and enduring monument to the people whose thrift and ambition are creating it. It will saddle no onerous debt on the taxpayers, for the stewards of the county with careful foresight have been preparing for the great enterprise now in hand. Nothing could better mark the recovery of the people from a period of carelessness and wrongdoing by recreant public servants—to which we here allude solely to emphasize that recovery—than the ability, the ambition and the preparation to do the great work now in progress. We congratulate the people of DeKalb county on what they are achieving and on the lofty character of the citizenship which can give such noble form to an aspiration worthy.

This Souvenir Edition of The Sentinel is a neighbor's sincere tribute to a community which has won good opinions by deserving them.

THE PRESIDENT AND ALASKA.

No one questions the honesty, the sincerity or the courage of President Taft. His want of wisdom, however, is sometimes such as to make the judicious grieve. He has been in a muddle about Alaska almost from the outset of his administration. The presumption is not far-fetched that President Taft is in much the same situation as to Alaska that he was in respect of the tariff bill when it was passed. That is to say, he knows as little about Alaska and the great schemes for its exploitation as he did about the tariff at the time he distinguished the Payne-Aldrich act with the encomium that it was the "greatest tariff measure the country had ever had." In his special message to congress assuming the entire burden of responsibility for the Controller Bay affair the president takes a courageous stand and an honest course; but he does nothing to solve the question of Alaska's development for the people. The whole trouble in the interior department that finally issued in the country's demand for the retirement of Secretary Ballinger centered about Alaska and its exploitation by stupendous and selfish interests. The wealth of our Arctic possessions is a tempting lure to the Morgans and Ryans and Guggenheims. They are after it. All that has been done concerning Alaska for half a dozen years has had a bad odor. President Taft will do well and act wisely to deal with the problem cautiously, slowly and, above all, openly. He needs a fixed policy for Alaska that shall be based on the fundamental principle of conservation of the national wealth for the people of the nation.

TAKE A YEAR, BUT GET IT RIGHT.

The board of public works and the council's special committee on garbage have about decided to repair the old garbage crematory and the board has resolved to enforce a more efficient collection of garbage. This is well. It will help much in present emergencies. Meanwhile, the board and doubtless the committee will proceed to investigate the general question of the care of city waste with a view to a new system, including a modern method of disposal. The belief is that it will take a year to get a new system established and at work. There will be no criticism of the board for taking all the time needed to inform itself upon this subject. If a year is needed, then let a year be taken, but get it right. When Fort Wayne invests money in a new garbage system there should be every possible guarantee that the money has been wisely expended and that the garbage problem has been solved to the best of the ability of this city to solve it. The achievements of other cities—notably Cleveland and Columbus—which have solved their problems well, should be minutely investigated. Other cities have taken advanced steps in the care of city waste. Whatever the board can learn anywhere that will be of use to Fort Wayne is knowledge there should be no failure to acquire. Take all the time necessary, take all the money needed—but get the right thing.

That Morocco row at first seemed to be the periodical excuse for a bit of diplomatic quarreling of the sort European chancelleries indulge in when diplomacy gets dull, but there is very clearly inside of it the potentialities of that one great war that the old world by common consent must have before there is disarmament, arbitration and everlasting peace. About all the powers are implicated in the muddle by direct interest or by proxy.

It is thought a year will be necessary to develop and equip a new garbage system for Fort Wayne. That much time and a little more will be freely granted by the people of Fort Wayne if it means assurance of the thing wanted, the thing needed.

His excellency the president of the United States at all events has mastered the rather difficult art of communicating his temper to paper. That special message on Alaska has some sizzle.

Anyway, there evidently never was an "Dick the Dick" note. Sorry. Somehow that has the sweetness of love-making and mating among the birds.

RULES FOR BOYS .... TO OBSERVE.

(The Woman's World.)

First, study your father. Realize that it is worth while to know him, that he really is a better fellow to know than any of the other boys or men who seem so attractive to you.

Be patient with him. Try to understand that he is just as much perplexed by the subtle alteration going on in you, as you are by the change you think is taking place in him. Remember he is not all-wise, he is doing perhaps the best he can.

Sympathize with him. Growing old, as you will find out some day, is no joke. It means a lot of disappointment and disillusion and heart-wrenching and sadness. You do not know how many bright dreams of his have faded, how many times, baffled and beaten, he has had to pluck up courage again as best he could and go on with the battle for bread and butter.

Remember, too, that probably he has had some golden hopes about you, foolish hopes perhaps, but none the less dear to him. He may have set his heart on your becoming a doctor, as he is, or a lawyer or minister or farmer, as he is, and it is pretty hard for him to reconcile himself to your inborn craving to be a musician or railway man or a mechanic.

Respect him. He's entitled to that, in any case. Never show contempt for anything he may say. Never seem to appear that you think he does not know what he is talking about. When he speaks, listen with attention. I do not say for you to obey him implicitly always; that is another matter. But even if you do not always do as he says, at least you can show him that you respect what he says.

Praise him. Really, in his heart, he is prouder of your praise than of that coming from any one else. Of course, he would not show it. Perhaps he will let on that he does not care at all what you think. He may even pooh-pooh you. But I will tell you his secret: A word of appreciation from you is mighty sweet to him. So, whenever he does anything you like, be sure to tell him. When he does anything you do not like, keep still.

Be affectionate with him. Keep your babyhood on him if possible. If he is cold, and reserved and repels your advances, still be as loving as he will let you. And don't overestimate this coldness. Whatever it may be for others, ten to one it is not meant for you, and very probably his heart is inwardly yearning for your caresses.

Don't argue with him. He has probably fallen into the habit of expecting you to accept anything he may say as gospel truth, just because he says it. Now, that is a harmless sort of belief. Let him think it. It pleases him and doesn't hurt you. And it's a trifle disconcerting to a man of 40 to be set right by a boy of 18. Of course, the boy may be right and the man may be wrong; but that is not the point. We all have our little vanities, and father has his; one of them is that he knows more than you. Indulge him. Some day you will be 40 perhaps, and will know a deal less than you do now.

Help him: He is a burdened man. Every father of a family has burdens you little understand. Life looks so different to him from the way it looks to you. You are young, and like a colt that has not been broken, kicking up it heels in the pasture, ignorant yet of bridle, saddle or collar. But father is more or less a pack horse.

He has ties you can not appreciate. He is harnessed, and sometimes the load is galling. Every day is more or less a grind. And there are risks and pitfalls, there are gadflies and wasps, there are the whips of duty and the fretting yoke of necessity. He has a sense of being tired, unlike any kind of tired you feel; not the good, healthy tiredness that comes from play and study, but the worried, wakeful tire that comes from spent strength that still feels the strain of danger and the need to make a good deal more allowance for father than he for you.

Whatever happens to you, you are young and will get over it. But with him, recovery becomes every year more and more difficult. He is getting each year more like an old rubber band that has lost its spring. He needs you, boy, your trust and help. Don't fail him.

And last, and most important of all, to make up the round dozen of words I have for you be loyal to him!

BACK TO THE SAME OLD SPOT.

Big Bill is the traffic policeman on a corner far down town, relates a New York letter to the Cincinnati Times-Star. All day long he fries on that asphalt, reasoning with old women who burn to cast themselves beneath the wheels of trucks, encouraging motormen into sanity, holding back taxi-robbers, putting the fear of a complex modern civilization into truck drivers. There isn't a second in his tour of duty that he isn't twisting this way or that, usually with one hand in air as a warning to drivers and his whistle hanging from his lips because he is too busy to put hand to it. He is the boss of a difficult situation, and he is a good boss. Every twenty days he gets one week day off. "Gee," said Big Bill one night, smashing the regulations by wiping niagaras of perspiration out of his eyes. "Ain't it purgatory, though? Me toes is cooked."

That was right in the middle of the summer's hottest run of weather; "Tomorrow," said Big Bill, "is me day off. Me for a good time, bo."

The next day the mercury was absolutely daft. The breeze would singe pinfeathers of a cast iron duck. Men and women were querulous, fault-finding and savage because of the torture of eight days' unremitting roasting. The traffic cop who took Big Bill's place on the busy corner looked up from a trying moment to perceive Bill, dressed in white duck and pongee, leaning delicately against a lamppost and observing his movements with critical eyes. In a lull in the traffic he approached the restful officer. "What," said he, "in the name of the seven brass hinges, are you doing down here on your day off?"

"An' where the divvle would I go on me day off?" asked Bill, sourly.

IN THE CHURCHES

THE PLACE NOT YET DECIDED

Walther League National Convention to Go to Milwaukee or Buffalo.

THE NEW OFFICERS

The national convention of the Walther League, which has been in session since Sunday night at Logansport, closed today without having selected a place for holding the next convention. Many delegates favored Fort Wayne because of its central location and its strength of league membership. It is thought, however, that the convention will go to either Milwaukee or Buffalo.

The sessions of the convention yesterday were interesting. An address was given by Director E. C. Wagehaupt, of Brazil, S. A., on "Missionary Work in Brazil." Life and habits in Brazil were portrayed in a very vivid way.

Last evening a special service was held at the German Lutheran church. Rev. I Kaiser, of Milwaukee, Prof. A. Klein and Rev. Stuehm delivered short addresses.

The national officers were elected at the sessions held Wednesday. As was expected, Prof. F. A. Klein, of this city, was re-elected field secretary of the national organization, a position he has held for years. Prof. Klein is a teacher in the schools of the Zion Lutheran church and his re-election was unanimous and characterized with enthusiasm on the part of the delegates. Speaking of his re-election the Daily Tribune of Logansport says:

"The office of field secretary, held by Prof. Klein, of Fort Wayne, was the only one in which there was but one nomination and the ringing unanimous vote testified how the convention felt about it. Prof. Klein has never missed a league convention and has been field secretary for years, his election having become almost a formality, so attached have the league members become to the officer."

The other officers elected by the national association were as follows:

President E. Ehlert, Milwaukee, Wis.

Recording Secretary—John Schmitt, Milwaukee, Wis.

Corresponding Secretary — Carl Rehm, Logansport.

Treasurer—A. W. Busse, Buffalo, N. Y.

National Executive Committee—H. Iasthrve, F. C. Keilling, R. E. Braunson, Robert Kreinsheder, Rev. F. local'd, all of Buffalo, N. Y.

Remember This.

Some close observer declares that a young man's character can be judged by the way he shines or neglects the heels of his shoes.

Ye maidens fair of all degrees,
When ye have brought unto his knees
Some lovelorn wight, ah, ponder well
Before your budding love you tell!
You'll learn his habits, good and bad,
And who's his granther, who's his dad,
And if he ever rudely swears,
And what's his taste in things he wears.
You should know this ere you decide
To walk alone or be his bride.
But, wait, one thing you'll not forget,
Or it may bring a vain regret—
Observe the youth who for you sues
And note the way he shines his shoes!
—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Two Boxes.

The average man doesn't object to a woman's taking an interest in the ballot box so long as there's something in the icebox.—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Exactly 2:30 A. M.

Arthur—Why is it, fairest Evangeline, that when I am with you the hands on that clock seem to take wings and fly?

Stern Voice (at the head of the stairs)—Without wishin' to be impertinent, young man, I simply want to observe that them hands hain't got nothin' on the ones on our gas meter.—Judge.

The Saving Clause.

Little Girl—Mamma, if I should die and go to heaven would I have wings?

"Yes, my pet, and a crown and a harp."

"And candy?"

"No, my dear; no candy."

"Well, then, I'm glad we've got a good doctor."—Ram's Horn.

Young Mothers

No young woman, in the joy of coming motherhood, should neglect to prepare her system for the physical ordeal she is to undergo. The health of both she and her coming child depends largely upon the care she bestows upon herself during the waiting months. Mother's Friend prepares the expectant mother's system for the coming event, and its use makes her comfortable during all the term. It works with and for nature, and by gradually expanding all tissues, muscles and tendons, involved, and keeping the breasts in good condition, brings the woman to the crisis in splendid physical condition. The baby too is more apt to be perfect and strong where the mother has thus prepared herself for nature's supreme function. No better advice could be given a young expectant mother than that she use Mother's Friend; it is a medicine that has proven its value in thousands of cases. Mother's Friend is sold at drug stores. Write for free book for expectant mothers which contains much valuable information, and many suggestions of a helpful nature.

AT THE FAIRY.

"Good for Evil," a western subject of the Lubin kind, is shown today. George and Bill were pals on a western ranch and of course both were deeply in love with Dorothy, thus beginning a story that thrills the heart and relieves the mind of all your earthly troubles. Tomorrow Faust is coming. Wonderful electric effects will be seen. One of the most notable scenes in the picture is where the Demon takes the old Faust to the witch's cavern. The mysterious caldron is boiling at one side. The old hag adds something to it and the smoke rises up in volume. Then she ladles out a cup of the beverage for the old philosopher and he drinks. The Demon waves his cloak before the graybeard, and when it falls we see a very handsome youth. This new Faust then begins his pursuit of Marguerite, which ends in the death of her brother, her madness and the tragic scene in the prison, which ends the story.

CREMATORY WILL DO FOR A YEAR

In the Meantime City Can aMke Its Plans for a Change.

TALK OF SITUATION

In the opinion of Member Edward J. Lennon of the board of public works, who met last night with Councilmen E. A. Wagner, Peter Braun and Gustav Rogge and Dr. Eric Crull, of the health department, to discuss the garbage situation, the crematory now in use can be used for another year by watching it closely and keeping it in repair and in the meantime the officials can investigate and ascertain the best method of garbage disposal and arrange for the funds to install a new system.

Meanwhile David Winburn, who took the contract for collection, will be called on the carpet and told that he must either get busy and do his work or throw up his contract. There will be another meeting of the committee in a short time when drawings of the crematory will be submitted along with the amount of garbage incinerated and the cost of disposing of it. This will give the committeemen a basis to work on.

Just at this time, in the opinions of the members of the committee, the fault lies in the collection and Dr. Crull took occasion to impress upon the city officials the importance of strenuous efforts for the next two months to remedy this evil.

He stated that August and September are known as the typhoid months and that it is necessary to the health of the citizens that no garbage be allowed to lie and rot in the alleys. Complaints average five or six a day, according to the city hall records and these are from all sections of the city.

Last night's meeting was preliminary and the committee had little to work on. At the next meeting there will be letters from other cities in which information has been sought, records from the board of works and reports from the collection department.

DE KALB COUNTY, HER NEW COURT HOUSE, HER HISTORY AND HER LEADING MEN

DEKALB COUNTY celebrates an auspicious event in the laying of the cornerstone of the splendid new court house now in course of erection. For three-quarters of a century the county has had historical entity and is one of the wealthy and progressive counties of Indiana. The new court house will mark another stride in her progress. Auburn, the seat of the county government, is a beautiful, enterprising and industrious city and is a fit setting for the gem of architecture the people of the county are building. Something concerning the history of proud DeKalb and her new court house are set out in these pages of the Fort Wayne Sentinel's DeKalb County Souvenir Number.

DEKALB HISTORY.

Something About the County That Will Have Splendid Edifice.

(Sentinel Staff Correspondent.)

Auburn, Ind., July 27.DeKalb county is one of the northern tier of counties of the state, situated in the extreme northeastern section. It borders on the Ohio line and there is but one county, Steuben, between it and the Michigan line. It adjoins Allen county on the north. In its business and political affairs it is closely associated with Fort Wayne and Allen county. Its people find Fort aWyne their most convenient city, aside from their towns, for business and pleasure, and they frequently visit the metropolis of northen Indiana. It belongs to the same congressional district as Allen and its men have at different times represented us in congress.

In aera DeKalb is about 60 square miles, being twenty and one-half miles east and west and eighteen miles north and south. Its land is finely adapted for farming and its is one of the best wheat counties in the state. As state elsewhere in this county within its confines are a number of prosperous towns, of which Auburn isthe county seat. It is not only rich in farming, but business of every kind is prosperous and her people are a happy people.

Like all of the counties in this section of the state, the Indians were its primitive inhabitants. The first settler of the county was John Houlten, who settled in the northeastern portion in 1833, building a log cabin there. The family is yet one of the most prominent in the county. His oath occurre in 1875. Other early settlers were the Blairs: Gen. Blair, of Waterloo; W. L. Blair, of Butler, and Benjamin Blair, of St. Joe. Then coming to the county in the thirties were the ancestors of the Widney, Park, Webster, Rose, Fee, Keep, Coats, Crooks, Platter, Work families, with others.

The county was organized by the legislature in the winter of 1836-7, and Auburn was chosen as the county seat. Wesley Park, who was the first settler of Auburn, and who laid out the town, was the first sheriff, he having been appointed by the governor. At the first election, held in July of 1837, the following officers were elected:

Commissioners — A. F. Beecher, Peter Fair and Samuel Widney.

Clerk and Recorder—John F. Coburn.

Sheriff—Wesley Park.

Associate Judges—Ariel Walden and T. L. Yates.

Charles Ewing, of Fort Wayne, was at that time presiding judge. The first lawyers of the county were: Judge Mott, who settled in Auburn in 1843; Judge Morris, in 1845, and T. R. Dickinson, in 1847. The present lawyers of the county:

D. M. Moody, P. V. Hoffman, J. W. Baxter, J. E. Pomeroy, Dan M. Link, E. W. Atkinson, Chas. O. Boorst, C. M. Brown, P. D. West, Chas. S. Smith and Hubert E. Hartman, the latter being prosecuting attorney for the counties of DeKalb and Steuben. These all reside in Auburn. The attorneys in other parts of the county are: Wm. H. Leas, C. M. Phillips, G. W. Crooks, H. W. Mountz, W. W. Sharpless, J. D. Brinkerhoff, E. M. McKennan, L. J. Gengler, F. A. Coats and E. B. Dunten. Once active, but long since retired as a lawyer in practice is Gen. ewLis J. Blair, of Waterloo, who was admitted to the bar in 1859. He is the oldest lawyer in the county.

The city of Auburn was laid out in 1846 as a village. John B. Howe and Wesley Park prepared the plat and took it before Francis F. Jewett, a justice of the peace of Lagrange county, where it was recognized and entered upon the recorder's books in that county. This was done on the 11th day of October, 1846.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

Men Who Control Affairs in the County of DeKalb.

Auburn, Ind., July 27.—The men who have been active in working for the new DeKalb county courthouse are the county officers. At present they are as follows:

Commissioners—Willis A. Dannells, Edward Kelham and Ellsworth A. Bordner.

Auditor—A. W. Madden; deputy, Frank Shook.

Clerk—Warren A. Austin; deputy, J. O. Denison.

Treasurer—J. J. Oberlin; deputy, Roy Oberlin.

Sheriff—Ralph Thomas; deputy, John Hoff.

WARREN A. AUSTIN,
Clerk of the Circuit Court.

Recorder—Samuel Haverstock; deputy, Hazel Haverstock.

County Assessor—George Scattergood.

Surveyor—Charles Wagoner; deputy, Alva Link.

County Council—Charles Eckhart, Luther Knisely, John Potts, Wesley D. Miller, Chas. S. Axford, G. D. Beeber, William Merica.

County Attorneys—D. M. Link and Edgar Atkinson.

HUGH CULBERTSON,
The Mayor of Auburn.

Judge of Circuit Court for DeKalb and Steuben—Frank M. Powers, Angola; prosecuting attorney, Hubert Hartman.

The commissioners in office at the time the first definite steps were taken for the building of the new courthouse were: T. A. Elson, Eli Walker, and W. A. Dannells. They voted the appropriation of $250,000 for its building, the vote, however, not being unanimous, Mr. Walker voting "no." Messrs.

RALPH THOMAS,
Sheriff of the County.

Dannells and Elson were actively in favor of the new building from the start. Mr. Dannells especially so.

The superintendent in charge of the construction of the building is Ernest Thomas. He is a Peru man, acting for the general contractors. He has make it his home until after the building is completed. Mr. Thomas gives the work his close personal attention and is skilled in the sort of work in which he is engaged. Personally he is one of the pleasantest of men and Auburn people have become attached to him.

The various committees who have had charge of arrangements since the plans for the new building started are as follows:

Building Committee.

Former Auditor Emory Shook, Father Young, Albert Hovarter, N. T. Jackman, S. G. Stone.

Commissioners' Advisory Committee.

Rev. A. Young, Sam G. Stone, Albert Hovarter.

Committee on Arrangements.

Dan M. Link, Michael Boland, Hugh R. Culbertson, George A. Bishop, Thomas H. Sprott.

HISTORY OF MOVEMENT.

The Steps Taken in the Plans for New Building.

[Sentinel Staff Correspondence.]

Auburn, Ind., July 27.—It is said, and with a good deal of truth, that there has never been a courthouse built without there being, at the beginning of the agitation of the movement, somebody who objected to its building. This is especially true when the new is to replace the old one.

"The old one is good enough. It answers all our purposes. The building of a new one is a needless expense. It is putting a burdensome taxation on the people that is altogether unnecessary." These are the objections heard and persistently urged in almost every movement in any of the counties for a new courthouse.

It was so in DeKalb county. The people had talked about a new courthouse for years. But the objection to its building was for many years stronger than the sentiment for it. If a man had run for office, particularly for county commissioner, on the platform of a new courthouse he would have been buried at the election so deep that Gabriel's horn wouldn't have awakened him. Garrett was opposed to a new courthouse. So, too, were Waterloo and Butler, and many of the farmers over the county. Hence until the year 1909 the talk of a new courthouse always came to naught and the men who advocated it were marked for political defeat.

But during the year 1909 two well known farmers of the county, W. A. Dannels and Thomas Elson, got on to the board of county commissioners as members. It was not generally known what their sentiments were before, but they had not been in office long when it was found that they were ardent [illegible] of the new building.

was revived during their term and [illegible] for its building, the making of an appropriation of $200 for the expense of a trip to be made by them and a citizen's committee to different cities to look at and examine courthouse structures in other counties with the view of selecting plans for the DeKalb building. This action of the commissioners was endorsed by the county council. Of course there was a howl. The committee took its junketing tour, and a year afterward, in September of 1910, the commissioners voted an appropriation of $250,000 for the new building.

On October 19, 1910, Mahurin & Mahurin, architects, of Fort Wayne, were called by the commissioners into consultation and instructed to draw plans and specifications. This they did and March 15, 1911, the plans of Mahurin & Mahurin were adopted. Less than two months after, May 4, 1911, after the proper advertising for bids, etc., the general contract for the construction of the building was awarded by the commissioners to Joseph E. Goodall, of Peru, Ind., for $193,232, he being considered the best lowest bidder. The contract for the plumbing and electric wiring was awarded to the Carson-Dayson company, of Danville, Ill., for $10,051.

The work of razing the old courthouse building, which stod on the site of the contemplated new structure, was included in the bid of the Goodall company and on May 15, 1911, they started at it. all the county offices and offices having been moved out of it. By June 15 the old building was razed and one half of the excavation for the new one finished. The concrete foundations for the new structure was completed by July 15 and then the work of the laying of stone was begun.

The stone used in the new building is the Indiana Oolitic stone of the quaries of the Matthews Bros. Co., of Bloomington, Ind. At the present time the walls are up a few feet above the ground and the work of extending them higher will rapidly progress.

The contract calls for the completion of the building within twenty months after its letting. This would place the date of its completion on January 4, 1913. It is expected that it will be ready for occupancy before that time, possibly a month or two.

The cornerstone is at the northeast corner of the new building. It is an immense stone weighing two and one-half tons, three and one-half feet square and two feet and five inches high, with an opening for the red metallic relic box underneath. It faces Seventh street and on this side is the following carved inscription:

DEKALB COUNTY, LAID BY THE
MOST WORSHIPFUL
GRAND LODGE
F. & A. M.
JULY 27, A. D., 1911.

When the building is completed it is intended to place at a prominent point in the main corridor on the first floor a metallic tablet with the names of the present county officials on it, including the county council, the present commissioners, and the commissioners in office at the time the new courthouse movement took its first decisive start.

FOURTH COURTHOUSE

Will Be the One DeKalb County Is Now Erecting.

[Sentinel Staff Correspondence.]

Auburn, Ind., July 27.—When the present magnificent county structure is completed it will be DeKalb's fourth courthouse. Many Sentinel readers will, at first thought, say this is a misstatement, replying with the remark that the building now in progress of erection will be the county's third courthouse. They are mistaken.

The first DeKalb county courthouse was what was known as the Park's hotel. This was back in 1837. It was a building eighteen by twenty feet in dimensions and one and a half stories high. In the lower rooms court was held for some years. The jail was a room on the second floor. The sheriff took his prisoners up and down a ladder. There were no steps leading to the upper rooms.

This building was used for the sessions of the court until 1843, when a schoolhouse was built and then it was utilized for that purpose. In this building court was held for a time and then what is designated as DeKalb's first courthouse, a wooden building that stood on the present courthouse square, was erected.

Court was held in this building until 1864, steps having been taken the year before for the erection of a new building on the site. This old wooden structure to was removed to one corner of the public square and later, in celebration of the fall of Richmond during the civil war, was burned to the ground. It was a jubilee bonfire started by the rejoicing crowd that assembled in the evening on the receipt of the news of the surrender at Richmond.

The courthouse which the present structure replaces was built in 1864 and cost $24,000. It was a two story brick and in its early days was considered an imposing structure. The offices for the county officials were on the lower floor and the court rooms on the second story. When entirely finished and furnished its cost was estimated at $30,000. The builders were Alpheus Wheelock, John McKay, and William Valleau.

The cornerstone was laid in September of 1863. It was on the 10th of ember the exercises were held. E. G. Bayless, a mason of high degree, of Fort Wayne, officiated at the Ruhlan[illegible]les and the oration of the day was delivered by Hon. Charles Case, a lawyer of Fort Wayne, and at one time representing this district in congress. It was a memorable event.

The first jail of the county, one used expressly for that purpose, was built in the early forties. It was composed of squared logs laid up in block house fashion. It was twenty feet square and eight feet high. This building served for a jail until 1853, when a frame building was erected. This, with other buildings for the county officers, was on the present courthouse square.

The present jail was erected in 1875. It is a jail and sheriff's residence combined, and is a two story brick, well adapted for the purposes, being really a fine structure. Its total cost was $29,000. The present sheriff, Ralph Thomas, and his family occupy the living apartments in the building. He also has his offices there during the time the new courthouse is being built.

PROSEROUS COUNTY.

Built Courthouse Without Increasing Taxes—Its Towns and Factories.

[Sentinel Staff Correspondence.]

Auburn, Ind., July 27.—DeKalb is one among the best counties in Indiana. Its people, as a rule, are prosperous. This is true in regard to both city and country folks. There are no otter farms anywhere, and there are no otter farmers. The same can e said of its towns and cities and their people. It has been so in the years past and it is so now. The county can well afford to have a quarter of a million dollar courthouse, a fact that will be recognized as truth when it is known that this new courthouse is going to be built without the taxpayers feeling it in a financial way.

In the county treasury at the present time there is $100,000 to pay on this new building, in a fund that is especially designed for this purpose and all the future payments on the buildings can be paid without the county levy being increased one mill. This is the reason why it is said above that "the new courthouse is going to be built without the taxpayers feeling it in a financial way."

This is so in the face of the fact that within the last few years DeKalb also built a new county infirm-them, particularly Auburn and Garrett, are rich in their manufacturing establishments. One fourth of the assessed valuation of the real and personal property of the county is in her manufacturing establishments, which is an increase of twenty-five per cent since the former appraisement.

Garrett has the shops of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. They have made that city what it is today and give it the increase in population over Auburn, the county seat. Auburn has some great manufacturing establishments. Principally among these are its automobile factories: the W. H. McIntyre company, the Zimmerman & Co.'s factory, and the Auburn Automobile company, each of which do an extensive business.

Formerly these factories were great buggy and wagon manufacturers, making Auburn famous as a "buggy city." With the coming of the automobile, they turned their work to the manufacture principally of these rapid-going vehicles and the Auburn auto is now known all ever the world.

Owns the Courthouse.

It is a somewhat interesting fact that the proprietor of one of these automobile factories, W. H. McIntyre, whose picture is shown in this article, is the owner of the present DeKalb county courthouse, that is he is the owner of the building now being used for that purpose, the county offices and the court room being in his building during the time the new courthouse is being constructed.

When arrangements were under consideration for temporary quarters for the court and the county offices during the progress of building Mr. McIntyre, who has four immense mense buildings in different parts of the city for his automobile and carriage business, was induced to vacate one of these buildings in the central portion of the city and rent it to he county, concentrating the business and work there in one of his other factory buildings, which with his extensive room he could do.

The factory building secured was one located just one square west of the courthouse site. In it he had not only a portion of his factory equipment but his general offices. It is large and splendidly adapted for courthouse purposes and some changes were made in the way of partitions and tearing out of partitions, etc., and the county officials, court and all, moved into it. Hence it can be said that Mr. McIntyre owns the present DeKalb county courthouse, possibly the only instance of that sort of ownership in the nation.

WAR SCARE UNABATED

Premier Asquith Brings Morocco Issue Before Parliament.

BEGS THAT ISSUE BE LET ALONE

Situation is Tense, But Europe is Hoping for Speedy Solution.

London, July 27.—Premier Asquith made a statement in the house of commons today on the subject of Morocco which fully bore out the description of the situation as one of real anxiety. The situation, the premier said, had reached a point at which it was bound to become difficult and harassing unless a solution was found.

Mr. Asquith said that Great Britain was not a party to the conversations proceeding between France and Germany, but earnestly and sincerely desired to see them result in an arrangement honorable and satisfactory to all parties.

He earnestly appealed to the house not to seek to enter into the details of the situation at the present moment. The premier said the government had thought it right from the beginning to make it clear that, failing a satisfactory settlement, Great Britain must become an active party to a discussion of the situation.

A too close analysis now of the causes of the present incident might provoke recriminations, which the minister said, it was desirable to avoid. The question of Morocco bristled with difficulties. The government claims no predominant position there and any statement that they had prejudiced the negotiations between France and Germany was a mischievous invention. It would, however, have been a grave mistake to let the situation drift until an assertion of British interests might cause surprise and resentment.

Paris, July 27.—The deadlock between France and Germany continues, but France expects that a way will be found for a peaceful solution. To this end she is prepared to go to the limits of conciliation but cannot agree either to evacuate Morocco or hand over huge blocks of African territory merely in return for Germany's reiterated assurance that France will not be bothered in the future in Morocco.

The international peace advocates point out that the real danger of the situation rests in the nations offending Germany's pride by driving her into a corner from which she might strike in anger.

The Matin today devotes an article to what it styles "The German Bluff," claiming that no one in Germany would think of daring the risk of a struggle against the triple entente. The paper adds:

"The Agifar incident demonstrates that Emperor William's efforts to obtain better relations with Great Britain were pure hypocrisy. The real aim was to separate England and France."

Full of Peril.

A leading European diplomat today summed up the present political situation for the Associated Press as a moment of extreme tension when anything might happen but from which some sort of an agreement was likely to emerge. Morocco had become a secondary issue. The real struggle was between Great Britain and Germany with Germany striving for a stronger and more influential moral position among the European powers and at the same time for territorial and economic expansion.

"Much depends," added the diplomat, "on with how little Germany will be contented and much on the personal attitude of the emperor upon his return to Berlin."

Premier Cailiaux conferred with Foreign Minister De Selves and M. Messimy, the minister of war, this afternoon. A meeting of the cabinet will be held at the home of President Fallieres at Rambouillet tomorrow.

MURDER IN NEW YORK.

Well-Known Broker Mysteriously Slain in His Room.

New York, July 27.—Murdered, apparently by burglars, William Henry Jackson, a well-known Wall street broker, 70 years old, was found dead on the floor of his bedroom today at the Hotel Iroquois. The body was covered with bruises. There was a deep wound over the right eye and finger marks on the throat and arms. A wash cloth was stuffed in the mouth as a gag.

The dead man's pajamas and the whole room bore evidence of a terrible struggle. In the bath room of his suite was found a bottle containing traces of chloroform. The pockets of his trousers were turned inside out, but his trunk and bureau drawers had not been touched. All this made the police believe that an attempt had been made to chloroform the man as he slept, and that he awoke and made a fight before he was overcome.

Apparently the murderers were frightened away before they had time to rifle the room, unless, as one theory is, they were not ordinary thieves and entered the room to get some particular paper or article.

Mineola, N. Y., July 27.—St. Croix Johnstone, the Chicago aviator, broke the American endurance record for monoplanes and biplanes today when he remained in the air for four hours, one minute and 53¾ seconds, circling the aviation course of about five miles, thirty-nine times. He was compelled to alight before his fifty gallons of gasoline were consumed because of engine trouble in his All-American Moisant monoplane.

Makes Confusing Situation.

The La Follette substitute bill differs in every particular from the house bill. This will throw every paragraph of the two bills into conference. Under the usual order of procedure Senators Penrose and Cullom, the first two republican members of the finance committee, and Senator Bailey, the ranking democratic member, would represent the senate in conference.

"Under the circumstances the regulars cannot afford to go in the conference," said Senators Penrose and Smoot in unison, less than five minutes after the action of the senate was announced.

"It is a combination, but in which we have had no part and we shall decline to be in any respect parties to the negotiations with the house."

In view of the attitude of the regulars, it is believed the senate conferees will consist of Senator La Follette, insurgent republican, and Senators Bailey and Simmons, democrats.

Leading republican members of the finance committee predicted today that the senate bill would have no chance in conference and that the democrats would insist upon the house measure.

PERKINS WILL BE ASKED TO TESTIFY

Former Morgan Lieutenant to Take Steel Committee Quiz.

IS HARVESTER HEAD

New York, July 27.—George W. Perkins, former partner of J. Pierpont Morgan & Co., chairman of the finance committee of the International Harvester company and a member of the board of directors of the United States Steel corporation, is to be summoned before the steel trust committee of inquiry. This was determined upon at an executive meeting of the committee which has transferred its field of activity from Washington. Just how soon Mr. Perkins will be called has not been determined. Tomorrow the committee expects to renew its probing into the absorption of the Tennessee Coal and Iron company by the United States Steel corporation during the financial panic of 1907.

Former President Roosevelt, to whom Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the board of the United States Steel corporation, and Henry C. Frick appealed when the deal to take over the Tennessee company and its vast orer resources was planned, may be a witness. Representative A. C. Stanley, of Kentucky, chairman of the committee, would not commit himself as to the calling of Mr. Roosevelt. When asked if the former chief executive would appear before the committee the chairman raised his eyes toward the ceiling of the aldermanic chamber committee rom and said:

"I have not yet thoroughly digested that subject. The Tennessee Coal and Iron company transaction, however, is to be thoroughly investigated."

Plans for the hearings here had not been completed and papers and documents necessary for the examination of witnesses had not arrived from Washington. Chairman Stanley announced that no witnesses would be examined today, the hearings to begin tomorrow morning.

IDEAL MOTOR TRUCK RETURNS FROM TRIP.

The model "F," one-ton motor truck, built by the Ideal Auto company, of this city, returned last evening after completing the four states' tour participated in by several automobile manufacturers of the state. The Ideal truck was the only two-cylinder truck in the run and was one of the three trucks entered. The other cars were pleasure vehicles.

The car made a most excellent showing, carrying a load of horse shoes borrowed from Mossman, Yarnelle & Co., and also hauling the confetti used by the pathfinding car as a guide. It was compelled to average seventeen miles an hour during the entire trip, the speed maintained by the big pleasure cars. The car was driven by Mr. Case, and T. A. Sperry, the general manager of the company, accompanied the machine throughout the entire trip, which started and ended at Indianapolis.

NOTABLE ADDRESSES DELIVERED AT LAYING OF CORNERSTONE OF COURT HOUSE

ADDRESS BY THE GOVERNOR

Hon. Thomas R. Marshall Discourses On the Duties of Good Citizenship at Cornerstone Laying in Auburn.

Auburn, Ind., July 27.—The following is the address of Governor Thomas R. Marshall, of Indiana, at the cornerstone ceremonies of the new DeKalb county court house this afternoon:

A building is more than the material which enters into its construction. There is a modicum of truth in the old superstition that ghosts walk in some houses. A building should be erected with a definite purpose in view and it is well to inquire whether that purpose probably will be accomplished. He who builds a house and intends to inhabit it but not to make a home of it, has done a foolish and not a wise thing.

It is idle to deny that there is much unrest among the people with reference to both the advisability of maintaining our present institutions and the manner of their conduct. I am one who believes in the ultimate triumph of the right things in America. Therefore, I do not hesitate to call attention to some of the things which have manifested themselves under our present system of government. The breaking down of the old home ties and home responsibility, the turning of the youth over to the state and holding it responsible for manners and morals as well as for the liberty of the citizen, the swinging of the pendulum from the asceticism of the eighteenth and first half of the nineteenth centuries to the large liberality of today, the influx to our shores not only of a population which we welcome, but also of a population which we do not welcome—all these have produced phases of public life which do not constitute progress at all and which are distinctly undermining our institutions.

One Crime Punished.

Success has too much to do with conduct. We are overlooking things which ought not to be overlooked simply because the man has, in the language of the day, "made good." There is but one crime which is invariably punished in American life, and that is failure. No one pardons the incompetent. It is not those alone ordinarily denominated as the criminal classes who are responsible for this lax condition of life. Parents send ten-year-old children to public institutions as incorrigible; they have no time in the pursuit of business and pleasure to look after the moral welfare of those whom they have brought into the world. Gambling is forbidden by law in communities in Indiana perhaps throughout the entire West because it brings in money. Pool selling on horse races is prohibited, yet very best citizens wonder why a public official does not close his eye to this violation and let it proceed in the name of sport. A lawyer deliberately sits down and writes a contract seeking to avoid the criminal laws of the land or a contract which will enable one man to take an undue advantage over another. Except in degree, how do these persons differ from the great malefactors of wealth?

Wink at Law Infractions.

A new regulatory liquor law was recently enacted in this state. Its terms, lived up to, would, I believe, appreciably lessen the evils of the liquor traffic, but mayors of cities, superintendents of police and other public officers, here and there, wink at the infraction of this law, suffer and permit it to be violated and attempt to enforce it only when some great newspaper hammers away at them. In the county of Monroe a grand jury refuses to indict whitecappers although identified by the man who was whitecapped, because the citizens of the county believe in whitecapping. Local self-government is a part of our heritage but local anarchy and local disregard of law is not the heritage of any son of Adam.

Vast numbers want the law enforced against the other fellow. The farmer seines for fish in violation of the law and the city sportsman wants him arrested and fined. The city sportsman commits trespass on the farmer's land and the farmer wants him arrested and fined. I want progress.

What Citizen Owes.

I want to stand for anything and everything which means equal and exact justice to all men and special privileges to none. I want life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness to be the inalienable heritage of the remotest to-be-born man in America. I want present evils fought with tongue and pen and ballot, but I want to utter the warning cry that tongue and pen and ballot will be as impotent as a leper's hand until every citizen realizes that the law must be enforced, and that he owes to the officers of the law his support when they enforce it against his friends and against his own prejudices and desires just as much as when they enforce it against his enemies and against the things he holds wrong.

Liberty is running mad in America. The churchman believes as much of religion as happens to coincide with his own views. The citizen has a private law book which contains his own code and anything outside that code is not criminal nor illegal unless he gets caught. You cannot make a good citizen out of a man who sets up his own standard of citizenship any more than you can make a silk purse out of a sow's ear.

Two duties rest today upon two different classes of people. No officer should convict a man for public intoxication on the Sabbath day without trying to convict the man who sold him the intoxicant. Any officer who will not use every power at hand to enforce not only the criminal but the civil laws of the land, should be impeached. Every citizen should be held responsible for the conduct of his children and should suffer for the sins of the children so long as they are within his control; and a man who is able to do so, but will not look after his own household, should be deprived of the right of voting.

Civil Militarism Needed.

We should have a civil militarism, if I may be permited to coin the expression and to define it. By that I mean that in criminal and civil affairs, every citizen should not only hold himself necessarily bound to obey the law but should hold himself ready by information and advice to assist the officers of the law in its enforcement so long as it remains a part of our system.

The ballot is not an inalienable right of a free man. It is given by society only to those who will use it for the common good of all and no man can use the ballot for the common good who does not have knowledge, experience and conscience. Voting must cease to be a perfunctory performance and post-election reminiscences of crooked deals must cease to be humorous.

Must Stand on Principle.

The eternal principles of justice to all men, high and low, and the punishment of all men, rich and poor, who are unjust to their fellowmen, must come to pass, and men who cast the ballots and enforce the laws must be men who say what they mean and mean what they say. Party organizations must be maintained because in union only is there strength. But a party organization must belong to the men who make up the party and these men must choose their leaders instead of permitting self-chosen leaders to use the organization as a private asset. We can no longer endure bipartisan methods in politics whereby you may be against me because of the things which I advocate and yet be for me because my election would enable you to make money. The cat in politics that always falls on its feet must be drowned and parties and leaders must go up and down by what they really advocate and not by the advantage which may come through success.

There is such a thing as changing the form of a problem without altering its value and there is such a thing as changing the form of government without altering its value.

Politics and Business.

Whether our government remains representative or becomes a pure democracy will make no difference unless business gets out of politics and politics ceases to become a business asset. The man who threatens his employe with loss of service unless he vote a certain ticket and the employe who votes to please his master are equal disgraces to our civilization; they are the little foxes that will destroy the vineyards of the fathers which, until recently, have produced wine enough to be poured as oblations whenever needed upon the altars of liberty. Men of intelligence and conscience will get rid of evil conditions under either system; men without will fail.

Bad legislation is bad; bad execution of the laws is worse; and bad judgment of courts is the worst. When justice ceases to be blind and winks the eye at a favorite litigant, she ceases to be a vestal virgin and becomes a common courtesan.

Makes an Inquiry.

As the disregard of law, the injection into the electorate of the ignorant, dissolute and conscienceless voter, the levity with which we treat great public evils, and the lack of backbone in the executive department, as all these have nothing to do with the judiciary, I think it appropriate upon this occasion to inquire whether this building is to be anything more than a mere adornment of this beautiful county seat, and I so inquire because I believe that recent decisions of our courts disclose that while we have an intellectual knowledge of our institutions, it has not been vitalized into conduct. I am, myself, an old fashioned democrat. I use the term in no partisan sense. It would be as definite if I said I was an old-fashioned republican. I stand here today wondering whether this is to be a monument to mark the stability, integrity and vital faith of a people in representative government, guaranteeing the supremacy of the judiciary in its exclusive field, and whether within these walls equal and exact justice is to be done to all men while care is exercised that the judiciary does not trench upon other branches of our government. I am wondering whether it will be necessary to change our system of government in order to eradicate the evils of the day.

When Change Will Benefit.

I announce myself for their eradication and for the change if needful but I firmly believe that no change will benefit until the voter casts his ballot both with knowledge and with conscience and until the officer understands that betrayal of trust and failure to discharge duty mean deprivation of office and disgrace. Facts have not yet been sufficiently gleaned in Indiana to disclose that a change in our system of government is the only way in which to right the evils of which we complain. That man is unwise who procures a divorce from his wife to marry a woman whom he has never seen. Theories are not self-working. A government, after all, goes back to the individual man.

I realize the encroachments of the money power not only upon the rights and opportunities of the average man but also upon political organizations. May I ask, however, whether these rights have been wrenched away from us, or whether our intelligence and our conscience have cared so little that we have voluntarily yielded them? If a man who has an ax to grind can get himself sent to the legislative grindstone, the people who send him there are as much to blame as the man who grinds the ax. We all know what is back of the real evil—seared conscience in voting and personal interests in legislation and law enforcement.

Hiring Clerks and Mayors.

We take a day to hire a forty-dollar clerk. We do not take two minutes to hire a mayor. We let the practical politicians use our political views as business assets. His is the only genuine bi-partisan rule in America. He shifts his followers from one party to another as his business interests demand. We must take an advance step along the line of suffrage to make our system of government succeed and to preserve political parties from the hands of men who use them for business purposes. These are the men who are always awake, who, a year ahead of time, have picked out precinct, county and district chairmen. Like Piccolomini, they know their man. If, just once, I could get men of all parties to take charge of their own party organizations and see that they really were their own organization, if I could get them to ally themselves with the party which best expresses their views of the common good for all men, I believe that the results would be so beneficent that the ignorant and dissolute voter would be rejected by all parties as a liability. And I believe that business would be even more prosperous than now because the business man would not be compelled to put in half his time watching his political asset.

Recent Judicial Action.

Without analyzing, may I be permitted to call attention to some recent judicial action. In the early days the Northern Pacific railroad was built largely by contributions of the public domain. It is idle to inquire whether the land grant was justifiable or not. It was made. The railroad opened up to settlement a vast area of country. This territory has prospered. Land values have greatly increased. The State of Minnesota, through its railroad commission, recently endeavored to fix the intra-state rates for that railroad. A judge of the United States court decided that in the fixing of rates it is not the actual amount of money invested in the property upon which the railroad company is entitled to a fair return, but that rates must be fixed upon a basis of a fair return upon the present value of the investment. In other words, that, although in this particular instance an investment of six millions of dollars has resulted in an unearned increment of nineteen millions of dollars, the railroad commission in fixing rates must allow seven per cent upon twenty-five million dollars' worth of property. If this be right and is to be the fixed and settled policy of the law, then we might as well admit at once that railroad rates in this country are too low and should under the solemn sanction of judicial decree be advanced.

To my mind, as deadly a blow may be struck at our ancient system of government by judiciary made law as by the most corrupt and venal legislature. Our system of government must go down whenever the courts attempt to take away from the legislature or from the people the right to determine the law under which we live.

Usurpation by Courts.

Several trusts have recently been hit by a decision of the United States supreme court. Into the law that court has read the word "unreasonable," by a specious plea that trusts and monopolies were unlawful if they were unreasonable in their restraint of trade and that there could be a reasonable restraint of trade which was not unlawful and that the congress of the United States meant an unreasonable restraint of trade, although that body had considered and rejected the word in its enactments. Dangerous to the rights of the people in its judicial enforcements as is such a decision, leaving it to the particular court under the particular facts to express an opinion as a matter of fact as to whether a combination in restraint of trade is reasonable, or unreasonable, by far the greatest evil in the decision consists in the usurpation by a court of functions purely legislative in their character. No sane lawyer would dispute that as between private individuals it has always been the law that contracts in restraint of trade for a reasonable time and within a reasonable territory, were not void. The inherent weakness of the decision aside from its assumption of legislative authority, lies in its theory that a corporation organized by the state has the same rights and privileges as an individual citizen.

Rights of Corporations.

Whatever others may say upon the question, I maintain that a corporation has simply such rights as are granted to it by the state and none others; that it is not an individual which can move from place to place and change its views and theories of doing business, and I believe it is the law that whenever a corporation does not do business and the business for which it was organized, it becomes the duty of the state to at once withdraw its charter. It is illegal for insane persons to marry and it is equally illegal for money-mad corporations to join their fortunes by the wedding tie.

Corporate evil is not in the formation of corporations but in their assumption of individuality and their right to act as they please after their formation. They can do nothing not specified in their charter and have no rights save those which are granted to them by the state and the moment they attempt to do other things, all their rights should be forfeited.

The rule of reason is a fine thing but I want to know whose reason it is. The danger of judiciary-made law has at once become apparent. Following upon the heels of this decision another court has held that a merger of the Southern and Union Pacific railroads is not an unreasonable restraint of trade.

Judiciary-Made Laws.

The legislature of this state, whether wisely or unwisely it is not for me to say upon this occasion, provided that under certain circumstances licenses should be granted for the sale of intoxicating liquors. Yet, a judicial body, and more than one in the state of Indiana, has refused to grant such licenses. Here, we have two instances: One of courts failing to obey the legislative commands, and one of courts writing commands for the legislature.

The department of agriculture has had a board investigating the substances which are deleterious to pure food products and the department has power and authority to prevent the use of such substances in the manufacture and preservation of food. There is an article known to science as saccharine, a by-product of coal tar, about six hundred times sweeter than sugar. It was discovered by one Ira Remsen, head of the board. Recently, the Remsen board reported to the department of agriculture that saccharine under certain conditions was deleterious to the public health and notice was given that the department of agriculture would regard as adulterated products containing saccharine which on or after July first were manufactured or offered for sale. In some strange and mysterious manner this order was set aside until the first day of January, 1912, by the secretary of agriculture, the secretary of commerce and labor and Franklin MacVeagh, secretary of the treasury. I make no aspersions upon the character of the secretary of the treasury but I cannot refrain from calling attention to the fact that he is the largest wholesale grocer in the city of Chicago; nor can I refrain from quoting the language of Secretary Nagel, of the bureau of commerce and labor upon this same question when he said: "When the question about these foods is a close one, every consideration should be shown to the man who has invested his money in the business."

People Will Demand Change.

The congressman who inquired, "Where are we at?" was not nearly so intoxicated as he was supposed to be. The people laugh at public and private speculation. They look upon the decisions of the courts sometimes as humorous, sometimes as corrupt, but underneath the levity there is a spirit which sooner or later is going to demand a rejuvenation in public life. The crowd may be hilarious and good natured but it is going to stop special privileges in legislation, special privileges in courts and special privileges in executive departments. The spirit of the age is such that these evils will be stopped if it is necessary to smash the machine in order to prevent its running away with individual rights. Neither you nor I may like to see the Republic of the Fathers tossed to the winds and a new and uncertain democracy set up in its stead where legislation and judgments of courts and executive conduct are to be subject to every wind of right, or passion, or prejudice, which may blow. If we do not want these things, the individual voter must begin to feel a greater responsibility resting upon his shoulders than he has felt for many years agone. He must begin to take vastly more interest in his public affairs and less in his private business. He must examine with a microscope the life, surroundings and friends of every man who tenders himself for public office. He must attend party caucuses, interest himself in party organization, become intensely eager for the right to prevail.

Voice of the People.

The voice of the people is being heard in public affairs more and more. When it speaks loud enough, it accomplishes its purpose. I could have done nothing in the litigation with the C. & O. Railroad company with reference to its blanket mortgage except perhaps to have forfeited its charter had public opinion not spoken upon the question of honesty and fair dealing in stocks and bonds. When the final consultation was reached, however, there was no trouble in obtaining a mortgage which requires the bonds to be sold for not less than eighty cents upon the dollar and the proceeds thereof to be invested for the benefit of the railroad company—requirements not contained in the law.

Travelers tell us that there is a point in Iceland where the rays of the setting and the rising sun mingle. We are at such a point in the history of this people. This courthouse may be only a memorial to representative government or it may be a temple; who can tell? Perhaps some judge may outrage public sentiment by giving too friendly a charge to the jury as was recently done in Oregon and public sentiment may demand his recall. Unless the people get a rebaptism of the Spirit of 1776, unless knowledge and morality are made the basis upon which the electoral franchise is exercised, unless a deeper interest is taken in public affairs and a keener scrutiny of those who tender themselves for public office, unless we stop kowtowing to the rich and kicking the poor, this will be only a memorial of the glory of your fathers and the decadence of their sons. On the other hand, a reverential faith in the ultimate destiny of the American republic and a solemn sense of the great weight of responsibility resting upon every man with reference to every public question will keep this place what you intend it to be—a resting place for poverty in her rags and a secure retreat for the honest man of wealth.

ADDRESS BY HON. FRANK M. POWERS

Presiding Judge of the DeKalb-Steuben Circuit at Ceremonies.

VIEWS OF OPTIMIST

Auburn, Ind., July 27.—The following address was delivered today by Hon. Frank M. Powers, of Angola, presiding judge of the DeKalb-Steuben judicial circuit, at the cornerstone ceremonies here:

Mr. Chairman, Citizens of DeKalb County: As one of your servants employed with the duties of a department of public service, and as one who feels a neighborly interest in the progress and material welfare of your county and its god people, I am permitted to briefly address you, and take part in this commemorative celebration. To be thus permitted to participate in the exercises of this occasion is the privilege of engaging with us in one of the most important events that has ever taken place in the history of your county, and is an honor I greatly appreciate and shall always remember. Historically, this day will endure beyond the fleeting memory of man, and all the ephemeral things that will be said and done. It will be carved into the everlasting stone which has been so impressively placed to adorn and give substantial form to the magnificent edifice which is now rising before our eyes in architectural grace and beauty, and which is in itself to become an imperishable memorial of the sentimeents and purposes which actuate you in the great and laudable undertaking that we are called together to celebrate. To you, let me say, I consider this a most auspicious and momentuous occasion. We are standing today upon that narrow passage way which connects two realms of measureless distances and divides two eternities of time. We are halted in life's journey upon this vantage ground between the future and the past, and with our range of vision broadened and extended beyond the present, view the prospect and the retrospect stetching away on either side in endless vistas until lost and swallowed up in space.

Time in Perspective.

In the narrowing perspective of the past we survey three-quarters of a century of your county's history. We see an invading army of brave men marching to the inspiring war cry of "westward ho" contending with the primeval forces of nature for the mastery of this country. We see the gigantic forests laid low and compelled to surrender their ancient birthright to those valorous knights of ax and scythe, and the peaceful plains that are now spread out before us are wearing crowns of golden grain in honor of the conquest, and are rich beyond the dreams of avarice in the triumphs and trophies of their victory. In this rapidly moving scene the wigwam of the savage is transformed into the cabin of the settler, and the more pretentious habitation of a later day. The ominous sound of war drum is stilled by the sweet-toned bell of church and school. The savage war whoops that echoed in the wild solidtudes has given way to mothers' lullabys and songs of peace; the wierd howl of wolf and catamount has been silenced forever by the shrieking locomotive that speeds across the content. v A short chapter of homespun history; a note or two from the great anthem that is sung to the glory of God, the peace of the earth and good will to men; a step in the ever onward march from savagery to the highest civilization that the world has ever known. Perhaps amidst all the revelry and rejoicing over the achievements of the present and the glowing and boastful prophesies for the future, this retrospect may appear to some who are here today, dimmed and clouded, saddended may we say, with a maze of recollections that arise before their eyes like the mists and shadows that gather at the close of day.

The Old Court House

The old court house, which so long stood upon this very spot, has disappeared almost as if by magic. Its passing is an apt reminder of the transitory character, the mutability of earthly things, and truly typifies and illustrates the uncertainties of human existence. A few days ago it was standing erect in all its usefulness, showing the marks of age, it is true, yet filled with the soul and breathing the very life of this community. But it has obeyed the inexorable decree of fate, that out of the fulness of time must come as an unwelcome summons to us all. It has fulfilled its destiny and become "as a tale that is told." To many who are here today it is even now but a reminiscence, a passing memory; while yet to others whose hair has been changed from gold to silver by the alchemy of age, it is more than a memory, it is still a reality, vivid and abiding. To them it is still a repository, a treasury which holds the tenderest and holiest recollections of life. A store house of human history, filled with records that told life's story from the cradle to the grave. The brief but eloquent narratives of birth, marriage and death, with all the attending circumstances and surroundings which measure up the sum and extent of human endeavor repose within its faithful breast. In bygone days its brazen voice called our distinguished and beloved guest and erstwhile neighbor to battle for life, liberty and all that men hold near and dear. Its walls echoed his eloquent appeals for justice and right. Many men who have achieved honor and fame in nation, state and county were identified with this old building, and owe to it a measure of their success. Some of them have passed its portals never to return before its final dissolution came. They have been an honor to this community and the county and community honors them today.

Cherished Associations.

It is these environments, these intimate and important associations so inseparably connected wth our old court house, that endears it to our hearts and will preserve it as a cherished and sacred memory. We are all leading dual lives. We are living in two worlds, the real world and the ideal world. The real world is the present; the ideal world is a composite of the future and the past. In the real world we meet the stern realities of life face to face and struggle with the imps of injustice and misfortune that arise on every hand to oppose our right of way. The ideal world is filled with sunshine and songs, where ministering fairies of good fortune are waiting to gratify every wish and satisfy every want. It is eminently proper to venerate the past, and to speak reverently and respectfully of those who lived in it, and of their achievements. But it is not profitable to spend our time in mourning for the "good old times," or in sighs and vain regrets. Poets and sentimentalists may sing their lavish praise of ancient Rome; they may engaged in poetical rhapsodies of the Elizabethan era of England, or the splendor and magnificence of the Dauphinage of France; or they may aureate the thin grey outlines of the future with blissful dreams. It is pleasant to linger in the after-glow of a beautiful well-spent day, and it is inspiring to watch the morning sunlight gild the distant hills and tree tops with the magic of a smile; yet, we can not altogether ignore the present. We must apply, however, reluctantly, the practical philosophies of life expressed in these lines of the poet:

Trust no future, howe'er pleasant,
Let the dead past bury its dead;
Act, act with the living present,
Heart within and God o'erhead.

World Better and Growing Better.

It seems to be that he is a wise and a happy man who can live proportionally in the past, present and future, and not spend too much of his time in either one. This is, the golden, glorious age, and the world is getting better every day. It is a better, brighter and more beautiful world today than ever before. Never before has our good old Mother Earth distributed her untold wealth of natural resources with so lavish a hand, or endowed her children so richly with the comforts and blessings of life. Never before has God Almighty been so good and kind to us, or manifested His infinite love for this world in such priceless gifts, since He gave to it His only begotten Son. Never, in any age has humanity been favored with so many and so great opportunities for doing good. When I was a boy, it was the custom for the people in rural communities to meet in the district schoolhouses, in the long winter evenings, and discuss current events, and the great questions that occupied the public mind. One of their favorite subjects for debate was: "Resolved, That the Signs of the Times Indicate the Downfall of This Republic." We had as many sad-eyed and sour-faced Jeremiahs then as we have now and they could paint things as dismally and disastrously blue as any calamity howler of the present day. According to them, the great ship of state was in dire distress; her faithful crew had been thrown overboard; she was manned by pirates who were sailing her among the rocks and upon the shoals so perilously close to destruction that in a few short years at best she must inevitably become a melancholy wreck stranded upon the inhospitable shores of time.

The Republic Will Survive.

In my childish imagination I trembled at the awful fate that threatened my beloved country and wept for its expectant and untimely end. Time has passed, and the evils and misfortunes which those false prophets pointed out have been bravely met and safely passed, and the downfall of this republic has not come. We have a better country and a better government than we had then; we have greater liberties and better laws than we had then; we are growing more prosperous and more powerful, accomplishing more of good and less of evil every day. And the signs of the times do not indicate the downfall of this republic, but point unmistakably to a splendid survival throughout all the years to come. If I had a message for you today it would not be one of gloomy foreboding, nor would it be an appeal to the restless spirit of distrust and discontent. I believe that there is a divinity that shapes the ends of nations as well as men. I believe in the doctrine of salvation through faith and in the gospel of the ultimate good. I believe that in due time every menacing evil will be overcome, and every problem that vexes the public breast will be solved. I have no patience with the class of men who are tramping up and down the length and breadth of this country, continually prating about the tyrannies and oppression of our government, of its fraud and corruption, and voicing a tearful sympathy for the downtrodden and oppressed. Like the raven perched above the chamber door, they have one doleful, hopeless word to utter, only this and nothing more. They can see nothing else, and can say nothing else.

Danger in Demagogy.

This species of demagogy is dangerous. It is educating the people to believe that good government is a mere matter of ancient history and that official honesty is a lost art. Wholesale and indiscriminate denunciation and condemnation encourages anarchy, and cultivates contempt for better and higher social, moral and political relations of the people, breeds disorder, strikes, lynchings and disrespect for law, and lowers the standard of citizenship throughout the land. What we most need is more men to preach a patriotic devotion to the principles of our government, and a stronger attachment between citizen and state; more men to worship at the sacred altars of liberty; men who will forsake the mad, unholy race for wealth and gain, and return once more to the family fireside to emulate the homely virtues of head and heart. Fervid and intense patriotism will repel the encroachments and invasions of every foreign foe; it will insure domestic peace and tranquility; it will compel a just and more generous recognition of the natural and inherent rights of all men, dissolve every plundering trust, and bring a full measure of happiness and prosperity, national and individual. When we think of this great and God-favored country and all its marvelous achievements in war and peace; when we think of our state and the proud and important position it has taken in the nation and before the world, and when we consider that this county is a constituent part of both nation and state, and has a right to share in the immortal glory of each, are we not right in saying:

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead,
Who never to himself hath said:
This is my own, my native land?"

No, there is no need for becoming alarmed. Despite the gloomy prophesies and terrifying advice of the office-seeking iconoclast, the country is safe and the government at Washington still lives, for it is founded upon principles that are as old as God and as enduring as time.

To the Cause of Justice and Peace.

We are laying the corner stone of a magnificent temple which we dedicate with speeches, songs and demonstrations of civic pride, and consecrate with our fervent, earnest prayer to the service and cause of peace and justice, and to the maintenance of the fairest and most beneficent form of government that has ever existed on earth. However, the true corner stone of the building is not the shaped block that has been placed in its walls with the solemn and impressive services of the great order of brotherhood and fraternity that has officiated today. There is another corner stone that was laid long years ago by the sturdy pioneers of whom I have spoken. That corner stone of this structure is the intelligent, industrious and patriotic citizenship of your county. You are building upon the honorable records of men living and dead; upon the good name of your county, at home and abroad. This is the foundation, the solid rock upon which this structure must stand. This duality of existence for which I have been contending extends to inanimate as well as living things, and is manifest here. Within the real building will be the ideal building, constructed from the Christian character and virtures of your citizens in "that spiritual temple, that house not made with hands." And it is this structure that will give beauty, strength and stability to the real building and provide for it a safe and sure foundation that will always stand firm and never fail. The architectural grandeur of this noble edifice will contribute to it a value aside from its particular and practical use.

An Embodiment of High Ideals.

The beautiful always has a value as well as the useful; it has an added value because of its beauty, an educative value and influence that can not be overestimated. The beautiful is an appeal to the higher, purer and nobler qualities and aspirations of mind and heart. It is a visible effort of the yearning, struggling soul to get nearer to the gates of pearl and the great white throne. And so will this building stand as an embodiment of the high ideals, the love of country, and the splendid progressive spirit that characterizes the people of this country. It will be an object lesson and inspiration to all coming generations to labor zealously for the public welfare and improvement, and to work unceasingly to maintain that moral and intellectual supremacy of their predecessors which makes it a greater honor to be an American than to be a king. The beautiful building will sanctify and perpetuate the history and traditions of an honorable past. It will stand as a prophecy of a still more glorious future, and unite the future and the past with valued service and the utilities of the present. Many of the temples and monuments built in ancient times have lost entirely their significance. The uses and purposes which prompted their construction have been long centuries ago forgotten. But amidst all the calamities and tragedies that this old world must pass through; that make and unmake nations, and shape the destinies of kings and men, throughout it all, this building will stand for living principles. It will represent in all its imposing and unperishable beauty your faith in a government "of the people, by the people and for the people."

Monument to Organized Society.

It will stand in its serene and massive grandeur as a monument to mark the triumph of organized society and the supremacy of the law. It will rule in splendid queenly majesty over a land where liberty and law are harmoniously and humanely blended together for the greatest good; where liberty means free homes, free speech and equal rights to all; where the fundamental law is self-preservation and mutual protection, and where the strongest elements of government are home rule and honest hearts. A land bound together with iron bands, held together in the grasp of friendly and fraternal hands, dotted all over with happy homes and peopled with men who crave no higher title of nobility than that of American citizens. Shall we not hope and pray that the purity and beauty of this new public building may never be tarnished or dishonored by unfaithful servants; that no shadow of suspicion or wrongdoing shall ever darken its sacred portals, or blacken its fair name; that within its stately chambers even-handed justice shall be meted out in fair and impartial administration of the law; and that the time will never come when it shall become necessary to purge and purify this temple with lash and scourge. It is not indulging too much in the ideal to believe in this happy consummation. Our faith in our country, in our free institutions, and our faith in our people is answered with this assurance.

And this, our abiding hope, and firm belief, we leave today as a benediction.

"You must have studied political political economy pretty thoroughly to be so impressed with the iniquity of the trusts."

"To tell you the truth," replied the candid citizen, "I don't know much about the inside workings of trusts. But I have seen pictures of the men who run them, and I have kind of taken a dislike to them."—Washington Star.

Mousse With Chopped Nuts.

Into one pint of cream stir five ounces of powdered sugar; when dissolved add one teaspoonful of vanilla and two tablespoonfuls of sherry and whip well. Take off the froth as it rises and lay in a sieve to drain, returning the liquid cream which drains off to the larger quantity. Continue whipping and skimming until no more froth will rise. Let the whip stand for ten minutes longer, then stir in lightly one cupful of finely chopped nuts—almonds and English walnuts mixed. Turn into a mold, lay over the top a sheet of waxed paper, put on the cover and bind the edge with a strip of muslin dipped in melted butter. Pack in ice and salt for from two to three hours, according to the thickness of the mold. Then take from the ice, wipe carefully with a cloth, dip for an instant in warm water and turn out on a dish. By way of variety one cupful of finely pounded nougat may be used in place of the nuts.

An Instantaneous Wrinkle Remover.

(From Eastern Styles.)

The average woman is always surprised to learn, after experimenting with all sorts of patent so-called "wrinkle removers," that the most effective remedy in the world is a simple face wash which she can make herself at home in a jiffy.

She has only to get an ounce of pure powdered saxolite from her nearest druggist and dissolve it in half a pint of witchhazel. Apply this refreshing solution to the face every day. The result is charming—marvelous. Even after the very first treatment the wrinkles show less plainly and the face has a nice, firm, comfortable feeling that is thoroughly delightful and lends self-confidence in one's appearance. This harmless home remedy is used by thousands of women to obliterate the unwelcome traces of time.

THE MENACE OF FAKE SEEDS.

One of the serious problems confronting the farmer today is that of seed adulteration. It is estimated that 40 per cent of the clover seed bought three years ago was nothing but weed seed. The seed most commonly used in adulterating clover seed is yellow trefoil or yellow clover. This plant is a native of Europe and is commonly grown in Germany and England. It has a little value in the spring as a pasture plant, but in the fall it becomes woody and unfit for pasture. Unscrupulous seed dealers put large quantities of this seed, which they obtain at a small cost, in clover seed which sells for a high price. In this way they make a large profit. This weed causes the farmer endless trouble. It is a plant which propagates itself, both from seeds and from its roots. It is extremely difficult to get rid of. If left alone it will soon overrun and kill out a clover field.

Trefoil is not the only weed spread by adulterated seed. In an experiment recently conducted, three areas of ground ten feet square were sown with clover seed purchased from a seed dealer's stock. These three plots averaged fifty-three vigorous specimens of rib-grass. Two other areas twelve feet square averaged six species of ribgrass and three wild carrot plants. In another plot of similar size night flowering catchfly, corncockle and bull thistle were found.

In the grain judging laboratories at the University of Missouri students are taught to detect these adulterations of seed. A quantity of clover seed containing weed seeds closely resembling the pure seed is given a student for study. He is required to sort out the impurities and name them. In this way he becomes familiar with the common adulterations of seed. This fortifies him against the dishonest seedsman and makes it possible for him to know when he is getting pure seed.

TO BUILD FOR THE QUAKES

Re-Enforced Concrete May Help San Francisco Meet Shocks.

(Louisville Courier-Journal.)

The double shock at San Francisco July 1 makes pertinent the question, What ought she to do about it? Though all the ancient writers pretty much and many of the modern talk about the dread phenomenon, it may be said that mortal man knows nothing about an earthquake except its terrible manifestations. At Lisbon in 1775 the velocity of the earth wave was one thousand feet per second, while in 1761 the rate was three times as great. At Tokio in 1881 the speed was estimated at times as nine thousand feet per second. But the cause and conditions of such convulsions in the earth are as inexplicable to us as they were to the ancients. What, then, is San Francisco to do about it? She is to expect other shocks, and build her houses with reference to such expectations. Fortunately the reinforced concrete is the material par excellence with which to build under such conditions. Our age has it in abundance. The double bolt was timely. The city already began to build carelessly, but with this warning she will mend her ways in this respect and take the hint doubtless intended by Nature.

THE BOY AND THE BIKE.

(Cleveland Plain Dealer.)

A fat man was complacently pursuing his way through an east end cross street. He carried an open umbrella and occasionally wiped his moist face on a large silk handkerchief.

Suddenly around the corner came a small boy on a bicycle. He turned so quickly that the fat man had no time to get out of the way. Nor had the boy any chance to sheer away from his bulky obstacle.

The front wheel struck the fat man a glancing blow, shaking his dignity and scraping his leg.

As for the boy, he and his bicycle went down with a crash. But the lad was up again in a moment and raising the bicycle bent over it solicitously.

The fat man was mad. He was so mad that he sputtered incoherently, and then with a vicious swing of one of his tan shoes kicked a spoke out of the offending wheel.

"There," he roared, "I guess that'll teach you not to ride on the sidewalk!"

The boy stared at the dangling spoke.

"What did youse do that for?" he whined. "It took me all the year to save up fer that bike—an' now look at it!"

And he knuckled his eyes with a grimy fist.

The fat man was touched. His rage suddenly vanished. He fumbled in his pocket and drew out a dollar bill.

"There, kid," he said, "take this and get the wheel fixed."

The boy let go of the machine and grabbed the bill.

"Say, youse can have th' bike," he yelled, and scooted around the corner as fast as his legs would carry him.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

SOME WONDERFUL OLD PEOPLE.

Margaret E. Sangster, writing of youth and old age in the August Woman's Home Companion, says:

"Oliver Wendell Holmes, who retained youth in its sparkling efflorescence to the very end; Edward Everett Hale, whose benignant wisdom and humor never suffered the slightest diminution; Julia Ward Howe, as exquisite in age as she had been charming in youth; Rebecca Harding Davis, strong, cultured and sincere through all the years till the last one came, are fine examples of the imperishable vitality of youth beneath the mask of age. There are plenty of people on the stage still, living and working and serving in the ranks, but they need

What Society Women Use for Shampooing

"Many society women," writes Mrs. Mae Martyn in the Philadelphia News, "prefer doing their own shampooing rather than go to the hairdresser's. The reason is obvious. Women whose social duties occupy most of their time do not feel like setting aside several hours for a trip to and from the shampoo parlor, hence the growing popularity of the home-shampoo. The use of canthrox is gaining favor because it requires little work and after a canthrox shampoo has been enjoyed the scalp is spotlessly clean and the hair takes on a delightful lustre and fluffiness. Canthrox shampoos are excellent for allaying itching and correcting all scalp and hair troubles. To prepare, dissolve a teaspoonful canthrox in a cup hot water and your shampoo is ready."

TO SAVE THE BABIES.

Street car advertising again is being used as a medium of instructing parents of the crowded districts of Chicago as to the proper hot weather food for babies.

Through the co-operation of the Chicago Car Advertising company cards prepared by the Civic Federation of Chicago, with the approval of the health department and bearing simple texts on the subject of "feeding the baby," will be displayed free of cost from now until the end of the hot summer months. The card is illustrated by a picture of a rollicking well baby, clean and lightly clad, drawn by Ralph Wilder especially for this campaign.

Already the Civic Federation has displayed, through the donation of space and labor by the American Posting Service, ten thousand brightly colored posters in seven different languages, all through Chicago's "big back yard" from the Northwest Side to South Chicago, and has had the co-operation of the foreign newspapers in printing electrotypes of the posters.—Chicago Evening Post.

DIDN'T RECOGNIZE THE LEGS.

An amusing incident is related of a young service matron who had relinquished her husband for two years and who, having before his departure insisted on a good photograph, applied herself assiduously to the upbringing of her two-year-old baby with a view to the child's familiarity with her distinguished father. Each day she would call the baby girl to her and kneeling beside her, would hold up the photograph, pointing out each feature to the child.

One day the officer came home and the baby girl, then four years old, was summoned. "Come, dear," said the mother in glee, "papa has come home at last!" The child surveyed the officer in perplexity and finally shook her head.

"What is the matter, dear?" asked her mother.

"Well," replied the child, "he looks something like my papa, but my papa hasn't any legs!"—Hawaiian Star.

A THEATER'S TITLE TANGLED.

Without notifying relations or friends, Miss Elsie Crosley, owner of the Mason Opera house lease, and Joseph Toplitzky, once check boy at the theater, were married and left for a short honeymoon.

An interesting situation now presents itself as to who is to control the destinies of the syndicate attractions in Los Angeles next year. Mrs. Toplitzky was the fiancee and for many years confidential secretary of H. C. Wyatt, and to her Mr. Wyatt left the lease of the Mason Opera house.

Mr. Wyatt and Miss Crosley were to have married last September, when Mrs. Wyatt was to have obtained a divorce in New York. The manager died a year ago. Mr. Wyatt's son, William T. Wyatt, has been managing the theater as Miss Crosley's representative during the last year.

Mr. Wyatt left for New York a few days ago for Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger's office to state his case. Mr. Wyatt has the support of Messrs. Klaw & Erlanger, while Mrs. Toplitzky holds the lease on the house—Philadelphia North American.

Animal Thieves.

There was found in the Tyrol, part of the Austrian empire, a swallow's nest lined with several banknotes, each worth $2. At about the same time a butcher in Dornbirn found the nest that a mouse had made out of ten banknotes, worth $4 each. These notes, unlike those used by the swallows, had been chewed to pieces, but the butcher was able to redeem them at the bank.

Removing Her Skin

(From the Feminine World.)

The quickest and surest way to make a good complexion out of a bad one is to actually remove the thin veil of faded or discolored outer skin from the face. This can be done easily, safely and privately by any woman. The process is one of gentle absorption.

Get an ounce of pure mercolized wax from your druggist and apply it at night like cold cream, washing it off in the morning. In a few days the mercolide in the wax will have absorbed the disfiguring cuticle, revealing the fresh young skin underneath; you will have a beautiful, clear, natural complexion. The process is pleasant and harmless, making the face look brilliantly attractive and youthful. It also effectually removes such blemishes as freckles, tan, moth patches, liver spots, pimples, etc. Every woman should keep a little mercolized wax on hand, as this simple, old-fashioned remedy is the best complexion beautifier and preserver known.

DAYTON LOSES GAME

In their first meeting with the Wheeling team the members of Aggie Grant's unpaid Eva aggregation played just like they had their coin in their pockets and took the clash to twelve innings before they finally landed a 6-to-5 victory.

Lewis booted a grounder in the twelfth inning and Donovan was moved around to third with one gone and O'Brien sent him home with a sacrifice fly. Doak allowed fifteen hits, but kept them scattered.

Jack Compton got through to the last inning of his game against Newark with victory in sight, then he lost control of the ball and one of his pards chucked in an error, and when the round was over six Lynchers had crossed the plate, one of them having been forced over by Rudy Summers, who was despatched to the relief.

At Terre Haute Frederick Alberts was not up to form and eleven hits netted the Potter troupe five runs. Stremmel held the Tots safe all the way, allowing five hits and two runs. Joe Connolly and Mickey O'Brien each got a hit off their former teammate. The scores:

JUSTICE HIT IN FIFTEENTH GAME

Popped Out Twice Before He Saved an Unbroken Record.

WACKER WINS FIRST

When Eddie Justice clipped a single to left in the fifth inning of the Wednesday conflict he not only kicked into the fray with a timely knock, but he preserved his record of a hit a game for fifteen straight.

Twice before the Grand Rapids team went down to a two-to-one he popped to the outfield and he was a bit afraid that his record would go to pieces.

Charles Wacker, known so long in the league as Demon Jimmy that he believes it himself, debutted in most approved style and much of the glory that the Fort Wayne troupe pulled out of the engagement was the result of his individual efforts.

He was hit eleven times, but he fought a game uphill battle and the support that he got was of the best gilt-edged variety. There were forty-six fielding chances injected by the home guard into the tilt and forty-four of these were handled by the infield. One bobble on a hard chance was the only fielding error he had to contend with.

After Vandagrift had walked in the fifth and been advanced by Onslow, the Demon laid against one of Dave Martin's offerings and cut it down the first base line so fast that Doc Schmick couldn't get over to intercept it and this scored the first tally. Justice advanced the hurler with a hit to left and Blount chucked in a sacrifice fly that negotiated the winning count.

Howard Holmes registered South Bend's only tally in the third on his hit to right, a sacrifice and two hits down the third base line.

Vandagrift started the first of a series of sensational plays, when he dug a ball out of the dirt at second in the first inning and tagged Ben Koehler before he could get into the bag.

In the closing inning Eddie Justice did a grand piece of work when he came in fast on a slow grounder hit by Core and got his man at first.

Roy Keener also got into the glare of the limelight when he pulled down a line drive that Koehler hit at him and doubled Toddy Kroy off second. This was the last of three double plays that Fort Wayne worked into the afternoon's pastiming.

Speaking of that Kroy person he hit like a crazy man. He had four trips to the plate and each time he registered a single and only one of them was close. That was one he beat out in the third inning when he hunted it down third base line.

Getting back to the Demon, he did some fine fielding stunts to help the game along. In the ninth he wobbled for a minute and two passes and a hit left a couple of men on bases with two gone. Holmes slammed a liner at the pitcher that almost got past him, but he nabbed it and closed the game.

He also made a great catch on Martin's grounder when he covered first base in the fifth inning.

Jack Onslow's long siege on the road did not affect his throwing arm as he nipped four of the five men who tried to steal on him. He was outguessed on Schmick and instead of getting a waste ball for the throw he picked up a low curve on the inside and didn't get the ball down in time.

Umpire "Wish" Egan made his debut along with Wacker. Mr. Wish has a good voice and keeps right on top of the plays. His judgment on balls and strikes was questioned two or three times, but the best of them miss 'em now and then.

His voice is his best asset. He calls balls and strikes distinctly and keeps the audience informed as to the status of the batter by occasionally calling the number of balls and strikes registered on his indicator.

Manager William Clancy got some of the dye out of his stocking mixed into a little puncture on one of his ankles and is nursing a mild attack of blood poison and this sent Bill Bailey to first base and McLafferty to third.

Fort Wayne played a great defense through the whole game. In the first Kroy worked his way around to third with one gone and Vandagrift nipped him at the plate on Koehler's grounder. In the sixth Schmick hit and stole second with nobody out, but he was marooned at third when the last man was retired. In the seventh Wetzel and Holmes both got on with one down, but a double play kept them from making the circuit.

Phil Geier drew a pass in the ninth with a man in the discard, but he was slaughtered in his attempt to steal second. Kelly got a pass and Wetzel hit and with Holmes coming up the atmosphere was gloomy, but he drove at Wacker and was retired at first on a bit of fast fielding.

HARD LUCK FOR QUAKER LEADER

CHARLES DOOIN.

That Charlie Dooin will be out of the game for the remainder of the season and that for several weeks he will be denied even the privilege of directing his fighting Philadelphia team from the bench is practically made certain by an examination of his injuries at a St. Louis hospital today.

When Outfielder Oakes made a desperate effort to score in the fourth inning of the Cardinal-Quaker game yesterday Dooin attempted to block him and as a result sustained a fracture of the right fibula about four inches above the ankle.

With Magee under suspension for a fight with an umpire, the Philadelphia club is in a run of hard luck in its battle for the National league pennant.

MAY STAGE PAIR OF DOUBLE BILLS

Secretary Dennis Wants to Double Up With Newark.

FIRST LADIES DAY

If Secretary Bert Dennis can carry out the arrangements he has in mind two bargain day affairs will be staged with the Newark club and the local club will have two off days in succession next week.

When the Newark club was playing as Grand Rapids it had one postponement here and will put on four games when it comes on Saturday and the plan is to play two each on Saturday and Sunday, staging the postponement the first day and advancing the Monday tilt to Sunday.

August 1st is an open date in the schedule and this will mean that no play will be seen here after Sunday until Wednesday of next week. The matter has not been agreed to by Newark, but it is likely there will be no objection on the part of Manager Jack Pendry.

In the farewell game of the present series tomorrow the ladies will have the first of their free attraction of the present stay on the local lot. With the games advanced to 3 o'clock women who want to take advantage of the liberality of the management need have no fear of domestic disturbances as they can get home in plenty of time to receive the heads of their houses and prevent cold-supper squabbles.

Manager Smith had not decided when he went to the ground this afternoon whether he or Bill Essick would pitch, but one of them will appear in the closing round and either can give Fort Wayne a good battle.

Harden and Pfeffer will take care of the pitching for the local squad and Valliere and Alberts will go on in the first double with Newark.

John Henry Meyers, the oldest pitcher in point of service in the Central league, is a bit worried about his pitching arm. He hurt is throwing a curve ball in Wheeling and it has been sore and dead since.

e has not been able to use it in a game and was barely able to pitch to the batters yesterday afternoon in practice. He has been giving it a good rest and is hoping that it will come around all right by the time the club reaches Dayton on Saturday.

SPORTING NEWS IN TABLET FORM

Jack Compton has won fifteen and lost four games for Dayton this season. He blew up in the next game after his sale was announced.

Alexander of the Phillies has struck out 136 batsmen this season, and is in a fair way to establish a new record before the pennant race is over.

Jim Gaffney, New York politician, announces that he will purchase the Newark club of the Eastern league and install Clarke Griffith as manager.

The Newark players have received new uniforms. They are a duplicate set made for the Springfield club by mistake.

Little Joe Raidy got so het up at a meeting of the directors of the Zanesville ball club the other night that he spoke right up in meetin' that he expected his team to win the pennant.

Hans Wagner was the first to reach the century mark in batting this year in the National league. Heinie Zimmerman of the Cubs also reached the mark last week, when he made two hits in the last game with Boston.

Zeke Ferrias, at one time a South Bend pitcher and later with Evansville and for awhile this season with Dobuque, of the Three-Eye league, and Rockford, of the W. I. league, is now with Monmouth in the Central association.

Jap Barbeau, former Red with Kansas City in the American association, has scored more runs than Ty Cobb, who leads all the major leagues. Barbeau has crossed the plate 86 times and Cobb 75. Jap heads the Kansas City batting order.

The Worcester club of the New England league has sold the release of Infielder Bert Noblett to the Utica club of the New York State league. The Grand Rapids boy has been playing great ball in the east and his advancement to a league of higher class was deserved.

The Cincinnati Reds released John Dubuc, Notre Dame college pitcher, two seasons ago and will have to pay $8,000 to get him back. Dubuc won his eighth straight game for Montreal of the Eastern league several days ago, and Garry Herrmann, Red owner, asked for a price on him.

Ed Sweeney, the Yankees' catcher, seems to have struck the brightest idea in getting Cobb stealing bases. Here it is: When Cobb is on first and you think he is going to steal, make a bluff to throw the ball to second but hold it and then catch him coming home.

Frank Chance is said to be anxious to secure Outfielder Miller from the Rustlers. He believes that Boston will be forced to get rid of this fellow for the sake of harmony. Miller, like Luderus, is one of the good ones that the peerless leader allowed to escape him practically without trial. Chance has offered Outfielder Wilbur Goode, recently secured from the Hub, and Pitcher Toney for Miller.

Pittsburg is grooming a candidate for the presidency of the National league next year. Secretary William Locke, of the Pirates, is the man. It is hinted that Tom Lynch is in bad with Barney Dreyfuss on account of his decision in favor of Chicago on a protest of a game played May 20. There will likely be some fun next winter, as Fogel will try his utmost to oust Lynch. The Charles twins—Ebbets and Murphy—may be counted upon to join any revolutionary movement.

Base Ball Tomorrow At 3 P. M. GRAND RAPIDS vs. FORT WAYNE

FROM THE BOX SCORES

Mike Mitchell caught speedy Josh Devore at the plate in a game at Cincinnati, when he attempted to score from third on a single to right. Matthewson held the Reds after he relieved Wiltse in the eighth, with a man on and one gone and retired two with two pitched balls. He made a double in the ninth and scored a run.

Dixie Walker has a split right hand as a result of his effort to stop a drive off Bush's bat and will be out of the game. He was hit ten times in eight and a third innings.

Pitcher James, formerly of Jackson, Mich., and later of Toledo, was so wild in the first inning of the game at Philadelphia that he started Cleveland off with a handicap of four runs.

Max Carey had another busy day. He hit once, scored two runs and stole a couple of bases. McCarthy played part of the Brooklyn-Pirate game and handled four fielding chances.

Ed Nelson had to go to the relief of Hamilton to save the first game of the double header with the Highlanders.

ELECTRIC WORKS INCREASES FORCE

Great Demand for Products Keeps All Departments Humming.

FIRST TRAIN OVER BROADWAY BRIDGE

Chicago Limited With H. A. Durnell, at Thorttle, oGt the Honor.

The Fort Wayne Electric works continues to add to its working force to keep pace with the rapidly increasing business. Every department is running to its full capacity on a ten-hour working day and in some of them overtime is the rule, and still teh orders for products continue to increase in number. This morning's addition to the force was greater than that of any previous single day of several weeks. It included a number of girls and the following men: William Braithwait, A. H. Reiling, S. F. Pitsford, C. J. Schafer, F. Lepper, E. J. Heany, William Ribel, Louis Kappel, William Wight, John McKering, Clifford Schondell, Patrick Murphy, David Arnold, Thomas Grant, Roy Rippe and H. Eickmeyer.

JOINT BROTHERHOOD MEETING.

Four Orders Plan a Mammoth Gathering.

At the meeting of representatives of the four railway brotherhoods mentioned by The Sentinel last evening, first steps towards a mammoth gathering of railway men in this city some time later in the year were taken. The meeting last night was held in the B. R. T. hall and as the sentiment was unanimous for a joint meeting, an organization with that end in view was formed. Peter Collins, of the B. R. T., is chairman; D. D. Miller, of the B. L. F. & E., is vice chairman; Harry Stonecifer, of the O. R. C., is secretary, and Chester Dinell, of the B. L. E., is the treasuer. Other members of the committee are Charles Bushey and T. P. McArdle, of the O. R. C.; Lewis E. Hedges and F. Neuman, of the B. L. F. & E.; Nelson Cranston and Peter J. O'Hara, of Division 12, B. L. E.; M. F. McCarthy, E.; W. E. Ferguson and J. D. Armstrong, of the B. R. T.; James J. Garwood, E. J. Chevanne and Louis Koors, of the Nickel Plate B. L. F. & T. E. Short and J. W. Barber, of Nickel Plate division, No. 537, B. L. E. This committee will meet in the same hall next Monday evening to fix the date of the big meeting and to outline the program. It was suggested that Governor Marshall be asked to deliver an address on that occasion and there will be other prominent speakers.

FIRST TRAIN ON NEW TRACK.

Westbound Passenger No. 23 Accorded That Honor.

Westbound Pennsylvania train No. 23, the Chicago limited, was the first train to use the elevated tracks at Broadway, which was opened to traffic this morning. This train was in charge of Conductor W. S. Stutte and was pulled by engine 7961 with Engineer H. A. Durnell at the throttle. The maintenance of way department and the men engaged in elevating the tracks are making a new record in that kind of work. Two-thirds of the work of separating the grades at Broadway and Union streets has been accomplished and another week will see the completion of the work and all trains running on the elevated tracks. This is a record of which the railway offices and track builders are proud and it shows what can be accomplished in that line when nothing is thrown in the way of the work.

CAR REPAIRMAN INJURED.

A. Mielcasz Sustains Concussion of the Brain.

A. Mielcasz, a car repairman residing at 1215 Hayden street, sustained concussion of the brain and some ugly cuts and bruises on the face at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon while at work in the east car shops of the Pennsylvania. He was lowering the body of a car on the trucks by means of a hoisting jack. The center pin caught on the edge of the hole for an instant and then slipped down unexpectedly, allowing the full weight of the body of the car to come suddenly upon the jack, the handle of which flew up, catching Mr. Mielcasz under the arm and throwing him against a journal box with the result mentioned. He was placed on an engine, brought down to Lafayette street, where the ambulance received him and took him to the hospital. His injuries are not regarded as dangerous.

PASSENGERS WERE COLD.

Heat Turned Into Cars for First Time inJuly.

"I have been railroading forty years," said Engineer Michael Laughlin this morning "and for the first time in July in my experience the passengers in the cars last night complained of the cold and requested the steam turned on. I turned the steam on and kept it there for two hours." Engineer Laughlin has charge of the engine pulling No. 9 to Chicago and No. 18 from Chicago to Fort Wayne. His experience last night was similar to the experience of some of the other engineers. They all declare that the temperature was lower than ever before known by them in July.

SOLD 800 TICKETS.

Wabash Shopmen Give Excursion Project a Boom.

Agent Ed Haas, of the Wabash, spent an hour at the company's shops this morning and in that time disposed of 800 tickets for the annual excursion to Toledo and Detroit. This is by far the largest number ever taken at one time by the employes and it means that the excursion is going to eclipse in a numerical way anything the Wabash has pulled off so far. Last year the company took about 1,200 people to Detroit, but there will be more next Saturday. The company is providing cars and locomotives for three trains.

MINEAR WILL SPEAK HERE.

Noted Y. M. C. A. Worker Coming Next September.

While here a few days ago, combining business for the Railroad Y. M. C. A. with a social visit with Secretary W. S. Whitbeck, A. B. Minear, of Chicago, international secretary of the Railroad Y. M. C. A., was asked to return and deliver a lecture before the local association, which he consented to do. The address will be delivered some time in September, when the Sunday afternoon meetings have been resumed. His subject will be Y. M. C. A. work in Panama, where Mr. Minear spent three years, a portion of the time being associated in the work with Secretary Whitbeck.

WRECK AT WINTER STREET.

Wabash Has Two Cars Damaged and Others Derailed.

At 5 o'clock last evening the second section of eastbound Wabash train No. 90, in charge of Conductor J. E. Carpenter, broke in two as it was a short distance east of Winter street, and when the parts came together a gondola car was doubled up like a jackknife, another car was badly damaged and three others were derailed. Fortunately the wreckage did not reach the passing track at that point and traffic was not interrupted. The wre crew was called and spent a good portion of the night in picking up the wreckage.

CARLOAD OF CRIPPLES.

Pennsylvania Carries Forty-eight Children to the Lakes.

Forty-eight crippled children, wards of an orphans' home in Chicago, occupied a special coach on Pennsylvania train No. 26 from Chicago to Plymouth this morning. There was also a special baggage car to carry the camp equippage and personal property of the children. The little ones were bound for Twin Lakes, where they will camp out for a week. It is an annual occurrence with the orphans' home to send the little ones down to that lake.

HAD ANKLE BROKEN.

Chris Noz Victim of Accident at Wabash Shops.

Christian Noz, a machinist helper at the Wabash shops, was taken to the Peru hospital last night suaering from a broken ankle. The member was fractured when a smoke arch front fell on him while at work in the shops at 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

HONORABLE MENTION FOR PENNSY.

The Pennsylvania Railroad company has just been awarded a certificate of honorable mention by the American Humane association for the exhibit which the company made at the recent convention of the association held in Washington, D. C. The Pennsylvania's exhibit consisted of an actual size cross section of its standard steel underframe live stock car, a miniature model of the car and various drawings and photographs all showing the many provisions made by the company for the protection of stock against injury while in transit.

TWO HAVE EYES INJURED.

Machinist Henry Meyers sustained a most painful injury to his left eye this morning, when the ball was cut by a chip of steel thrown out by the machine he was operating. He was attended by the company's occulist, who says the sight will not be permanently affected. Machinist Ed White also sustained injury to one of his eyes this morning. While grinding a tool some of the dust from the emery wheel got in one of his eyes. He was attended by the company's occulist.

WILL BUILD UNION DEPOT.

All of the Cincinnati lines, including the Pennsylvania, have finally got together upon a union depot proposition and the Cincinnati Enquirer says that a station costing $40,000,000 will be erected within the coming two years. The roads interested are the Pennsylvania, the C. & O., the New York Central, the L. & N., the B. & O., the C. H. & D., the N. & W. and the Q. & C.

DEMAND FOR FARMERS IN WEST.

Reports from the Canadian west indicate that this year's harvest will be large and that the farmers of Manitoba and Alberta will need from 40,000 to 50,000 men to assist them. The wheat harvest is estimated at 200,000,000 bushels, which exceeds all previous records. Railroads will run excursions for farm laborers at reduced rates.

CALLED TO UNCLE'S FUNERAL.

V. R. Shaner, a stenographer in the Pennsylvania store room, was called to Dayton, Ohio, this morning to attend the funeral of his uncle. The deceased died yesterday and the news came as a shocking surprise to Mr. Shaner.

Master Car Builder J. A. Graham and John A. Allen returned from Columbus, O., this morning. They had been there two or three days on business for the Pennsylvania.

The Pittsburg papers announce the death of Mrs. W. E. Downey, the wife of an official of the Pennsylvania lines west, who is quite well known to officials of the company who live in Fort Wayne. Mrs. Downey was sixty years old.

Clergymen will not have to pay full fare in Minnesota after August 1. The full rate has been charged clergymen for the last three years, but in accordance with a privilege granted before the 2-cent fare became effective the rate for clergy was reduced to one-half the regular price.

To carry 49,491,000 people, or one-tenth of the total passenger traffic in 1910 without a single fatal accident, is the record claimed by the Harriman railroad lines in a report made by the director of maintenance and operation. THEIR LAST NIGHT.

Neglected Wife Had Run Away For a Few Days of Pleasure.

THE dreamy stillness of the mountain air had woven a spell over the man and woman as they sat close together, gazing down the uneven slope that stretched before them. The silvery rim of the moon rose through feathery clouds, making a picture to which no artist could do justice. It was an evening in midsummer—such an evening as makes love seem the more beautiful—and the man and woman had loved each other since childhood.

They were both young, he not over twenty-five, the woman several years his junior. She had a sad, wistful little face and clear white skin, offset by a mass of chestnut hair. The man was tall and handsome and, like the woman, dark. The unmistakable stamp of good breeding encompassed them both.

The woman stirred, with a sigh. "It is our last night here," she said. "Tomorrow you must return to your work, I to my husband." A groan escaped her at the mentioning of that name. Her companion frowned. His thoughts seemed far from pleasant. Then after a moment, "Is he very—busy nowadays?" It was as though nothing else could be said at such a time. She thrust out her hand with an impatient little gesture.

"Oh, yes, I dare say. They tell me he is very successful, yet he gives me only the bare necessities. He will never take me anywhere, is not civil to me at times, and yet"—her voice dropped to a whisper—"I said 'until death do us part.'"

The man patted her on the shoulder affectionately. "We'll slip away again later on, little girl," he said, "and have another junket just like this one. We've had a great time together, have we not—just you and I?" His eyes were soft and clear.

She leaned toward him and put an arm about his neck. On her face was the love beyond words. "Phil, old pal," she said, "you're just the nicest brother that a girl ever had!"—William Sanford in Puck.

He Had His Tea.

"Jack," said Mr. Brown to his only son and heir, "I've got a good mind to send you to bed without any tea."

Jack—Why, dad?

Dad—I hear that you have disobeyed your grandmother, who told you not to slide down the banister, and you continued to do so.

Jack—Grandma didn't tell me not to, dad. She only came to me and said, "I wouldn't slide down those banisters, my lad."

Dad—Well?

Jack—Well, dad, I shouldn't think she would, an old lady like her. Should you, dad?

Mr. Brown didn't pass an opinion, thinking it best to let things drop.—Ideas.

Hence the Knock.

"I haven't a bit of use for that man."

"You haven't?"

"No, sir. He's absolutely good for nothing. Of all the ordinary dubs in this town he is the limit.

"What seems to be your especial grouch against him?"

"My grouch, sir, is just this. That idiot is making three times as much money as I am."—Detroit Free Press.

Not a Result.

She—I see where canary is to be the fashionable color for costumes.

He—I wish it would follow that you could buy your next new dress for a song.—Baltimore American.

If there ever was a time when you ought to be making real estate investments, it is now. There are more opportunities for making money in GARY at the present time than there ever was before, and there is no chance to lose.

The possibilities for profitable investment in real estate in a city like Gary are so great that they cannot be described. Four or five years ago this was a wilderness without a habitation; now it is the Capital Center of an industry that more clearly indicates the progress, development, prosperity and wealth of every civilized country on the face of the earth than any other industry—THE IRON AND STEEL INDUSTRY.

Reader, do you want an interest in this great manufacuring center now, when you can get it at mere fraction of what it will be worth in three to five years? Or are you willing to watch this great Pittsburg of the West grow into a population of 250,000 people without profiting by the development and increase in values that always have and always will follow the investment of enormous capital in industrial enterprises of this kind, and refer to it five years from now as the opportunity you cast aside?

We have already disposed of a large number of lots to some of the most prominent business men of this city, and present prices ranging from $175.00 to $300.00 on the remaining lots only hold good for a few weeks.

SHOULDERS WHOLE JOB

President Assumes Entire Responsibility in the Alaskan Case.

SPECIAL MESSAGE GOES TO SENATE

With Some Feeling He Says His Brother Had No Interest There.

Washington, July 27—President Taft sent a special message to the senate yesterday shouldering full responsibility opening for settlement and development 12,800 acres of the Chugach National Forest Reserve in Alaska—an incident which has become to be known as the "Controller Bay Affair." In concluding he brands the now famous "Dick to Dick" postscripts as a "wicked fabrication" and says that Charles P. Taft, whose name appeared in the alleged postscript, "has no interest in Alaska, never had, and knows nothing of the circumstances connected with this transaction." Moreover, the president adds, his brother does not even remember that he ever met Richard S. Ryan, representing the Controller Railway & Navigation company.

As for eliminating the land question from the reserve, the president says that there is no danger of the Controller Railway & Navigation company or any other interests monopolizing the field, and nothing to show that this company is in any way connected with the Morgan-Guggenheim interests. Hence, he believes that in eliminating the land he has acted for the best interests of the nation.

Alone is Responsible.

"I wish to be as specific as possible upon this point," says the president in his message, "and to say that I alone am responsible for the enlargement of the proposed elimination from 120 acres to 12,800 acres, and that I proposed the change and stated my reasons therefor. The thing which the Territory of Alaska needs is development, and where rights and franchises can be properly granted to encourage investment and construct a railroad without conferring exclusive privileges, I believe it to be in accordance with good policy to grant them."

Accompanying the President's message are documents, reports and maps bearing on the case, as requested from him by a senate resolution of June 27th last. "I deem it wise," says the message, "to accompanying the submission of these documents with a statement in narrative form of the action of the administration with the reasons therefor." Here follows a description of Controller Bay and environs and a map showing the effect of withdrawing the much mooted 12,800 acres from the reserve. The president then takes up the thread of his narrative as concerns the events that precipitated the controversy.

Goes Into History.

He relates how Ryan, representing the Controller Railway and Navigation company, applied in 1909 for the elimination of a tract to enable the company to secure railroad terminals, etc. The application was referred to the forestry bureau and then to the navy department with a view that perhaps the navy desired to use Controller Bay as a reservation. The forestry interests found no objection to the elimination of the tract indicated, "or indeed," as the president writes, "to the elimination of 18,000 acres in the northwest shore of Controller Bay."

The navy department's answer was "negative" says the president, and after the matter had been considered by the secretary of agriculture, by the secretary of the interior, and the general land office, a recommendation was made to him that 320 acres with a frontage of 160 rods on the northwest shore of Controller Bay be thrown open. A formal order to this effect was finally submitted to him in October, 1910, but when the matter came before the cabinet late in that month he found objection to it.

Reasons for His Stand.

His reasons for taking this stand he explains in his message in part as follows:

"I expressed dissatisfaction with the order because it purported on its face to make the elimination for the benefit of a railroad company of a tract of land which the company could not by lawful entry secure, for it was a tract 320 acres in one body when only 160 acres could thus be acquired. In the second place, I preferred to make a much larger elimination of a tract facing the entire channel, and with sufficient room for a terminal railway town. I was willing to do this because I found the restrictions in the law sufficient to prevent the possibility of any monopoly of either the upland or the harbor or channel by the Controller Railway and Navigation company or any other persons or company. Because of a lack of time sufficient to draft a memorandum myself, I requested the secretary of the interior, who, with the secretary of agriculture, after full discussion, had agreed in my conclusion, to prepare a letter setting forth the reasons for making the larger elimination, so that it might become a part of the record.

"I wish to be as specific as possible upon this point, and to say that I alone am responsible for the enlargement of the proposed elimination from 320 acres to 12,800 acres, and that I proposed the change and stated my reasons therefor, and while both secretaries cordially concurred in it the suggestion was mine."

Had Faith in Concern.

The president says he had every assurance at the time that the Controller Railway and Navigation company was an independent enterprise working in all good faith, and that no evidence to the contrary has since been brought to his attention. "Of course it was possible," he continues, "that the owners of the Copper River Railway company" (Messrs. Morgan and Guggenheim) "might attempt to buy this railroad when and if it were built. It was possible that Mr. Ryan was acting for the interests of the Copper River railroad, although I did not believe it; but whether this was true or not it was clear that the order of elimination by reason of the restrictions of the act of congress would not permit the owners of either railroad to shut out any other capitalists." Moreover, he states, the rates to be charged would be always subject to congressional control, and if government ownership seemed the wise policy under the peculiar circumstances.

"Ample land for right of way, harbor frontage and terminals must always remain available under the law for government use, or if it is prefered to take over to the government a railway built by private enterprise, condemnation is easy.

"I am as strongly convinced as anyone of the necessity for the conservation of our national resources," says the president, "and as much opposed as any one to their monopolization by large corporations, but my convictions on this point did not deter me from taking the step which I hoped might lead to encouraging the construction of a railway from Controller Bay to the Bering coal fields. I thought the paring down of the amount of public land to be acquired for terminals by the railway company proposing to build the railroad was a poor policy and one not calculated to secure investment or speedy construction."

Explains Restrictions.

The president goes on to explain that there are iron-bound limitations covering the method for securing title for government lands and for this reason he feels no fear of any interest obtaining a monopoly. Briefly the restrictions are:

First: Not more than 160 acres can be entered in a single body by scrip.

Second: No location of scrip along any navigable river or other waters can be made within eighty rods of any lands already located along such waters. No entry can be allowed extending more than 160 rods along the shore of any navigable water; and along such shore a space of at least eighty rods must be reserved from entry between all such claims. Moreover the statute expressly provides that a roadway sixty feet in width, parallel to the shore line as near as may be practicable, shall be reserved for the use of the public as a highway.

Third: Nothing in the act contained is to be construed to authorize entries to be made or title to be acquired to the shore of any navigable waters within the district.

"The whole contention that the executive order and the opening to settlement of the shore of Controller Bay grants a monopoly to the railway company," he resumes, "rests on a claim that it has given an opportunity to persons using scrip to appropriate the control of the only available and practicable parts of the channel by the location of the scrip opposite to those parts. If now the location of the scrip opposite to the harbor gives no right to reach the harbor except as congress may expressly give it, clearly the Controller Railway and Navigation company has not the slightest opportunity for exclusive appropriation of the harbor facilities unless congress shall by future act deliberately and voluntarily confer it."

Answers the Critics.

Having explained in detail his reasons for opening up the land in question, the president takes occasion to answer several incidental criticisms. "The order has been criticised because it was not in the form of a proclamation, instead of an order," he writes. This was determined by Mr. Graves, the forester, he explains, and he quotes a letter of Mr. Graves to the effect that when a comparatively small area is eliminated from a national forest the executive order is very commonly used instead of a proclamation.

As to the charge made on the floor of the senate that the order was secret, the president says, "This was utterly unfounded." In support of this, he says that ten days before the order was made the details of Ryan's application and the probability of its being granted were given wide publicity. He cites in this respect that The Associated Press carried an account of the matter October 28th, 1910, as taken from a typewritten statement issued by the interior department.

The order has also been criticised, he says, on the ground that it did not contain provision delaying its taking effect for thirty days after its publication, as orders restoring land to settlement by home-steaders frequently do.

Record Explains It.

In this respect the president says: "An examination of the record furnishes an explanation of this feature of the order as made. When in October the two departments had agreed with my acquiescence that the order should be an elimination of only 320 acres. * * * it was deemed wise to spread on the face of the order a specific declaration that it was made to afford terminals for the Controller Railway and Navigation company, and as no one else was expected to intervene and take up any part of the eliminated tract, the restoration was made immediate. The form thus amended was submitted to the secretary of agriculture, who expressed his preference for the immediate restoration order. When I directed the striking out of the reference to the railway company and the enlargement of the area from 320 acres to 12,800 acres, the form of the order in its provision for immediate restoration was not changed. I have no doubt that this was the reason why the order issued took the form it did. Had the postponement clause been suggested, I would, doubtless, have directed it to be embodied in the order. But the event has proven that it was really not important in this case, for in now nearly nine months only the Controller Railway and Navigation Co. has made any scrip entries on the eliminated tract."

The "Dick to Dick" Letter.

Taking up the "Dick to Dick" episode the president says in conclusion:

"Before closing, I desire to allude to a circumstance which the terms of this resolution make apt and relevant. It is a statement by one Miss M. F. Abbott that in an examination of the files of the interior department a few weeks ago, she found a postscript attached to a letter of July 13, 1910, addressed by Mr. Richard S. Ryan to Secretary Ballinger—and in the present record—urging the elimination of land enough for termigals for the Controller Railway & Navigation Co. The postscript was said to read as follows:

Dear D——

I went to see the president the other day. He asked me who it was I represented. I told him according to our agreement, that I represented myself. But this didn't seem to satisfy him. So I sent for Charlie Taft and asked him to tell his brother, the president, who it was I really represented. The president made no further objection to my claim.

Yours,

Dick.

"The postscript is not now on the files of the department. If it were it would be my duty to transmit it under this resolution. I do not transmit it, not only for the reason that it is not now on the files of the department, but for the reason that it never was on the files of the department, at least as an authentic document. Who is really responsible for its wicked fabrication if it ever existed, or for the viciously false statement made as to its authenticity, is immaterial for the purpose of this communication. The purport of the postscript is, and the intention of the fabricator was, to make Mr. Richard S. Ryan testify through its words to the public that although I was at first opposed in the public interest to granting the elimination which he requested, nevertheless through the undue influence of my brother, Mr. Charles P. Taft, and the disclosure of the real persons in interest, I was induced improperly, and for the promotion of their private gain, to make the order.

Exonerates His Brother.

"The statement, in so far as my brother is concerned—and that is the chief feature of the postscript—is utterly unfounded. He never wrote to me or spoke to me in reference to Richard S. Ryan or on the subject of Controller Bay or the granting of any privileges or the making of any orders in respect to Alaska. He has no interest in Alaska, never had, and knows nothing of the circumstances connected with this transaction. He does not remember that he ever met Richard S. Ryan. He never heard of the Controller Bay railroad until my cablegram of inquiry reached him, which, with his answer, is in the record.

"Mr. Ballinger says in a telegram in answer to my inquiry, both of which are in the record, that he never received such a postscript and that he was in Seattle on the date of July 13, when it was said to have been written.

"Mr. Richard S. Ryan, in a letter which he has sent me without solicitation, and which is in the record, says that he never met my brother, Mr. Charles P. Taft, and that so far as he knows, Mr. Charles P. Taft never had the slightest interest in Controller Bay, in the Controller Railway & Navigation Co., or in any Alaskan company, and he utterly denies writing or signing the alleged postscript. The utter improbability of his writing such a postscript to Mr. Ballinger at Washington, when the latter was away for his vacation for two months, must impress everyone.

Ballinger Never Saw It.

"The fact is that Mr. Ballinger never saw the letter of July 13, 1910, to which this postscript is said to have been attached. It was sent to me by Mr. Carr, Secretary Ballinger's private secretary, at Beverly, on July 14—the next day. I read the letter at Beverly in August with other papers and sent them to the white house. It was placed upon the white house files and remained there until April 22, 1911, when it was, by request of Secretary Fisher, returned to the interior department, and it was after this that Miss Abbott says she saw the letter with the postscript attached. Mr. Carr saw no such postscript when he sent the letter to me. I did not see it when I read it. No one saw it in the executive office, but it remained to appear as a postscript when Miss Abbott saw the letter in April or May on the files of the interior department. All others were denied the sight.

"The person upon whose statement the existence of what has been properly characterized as an amazing postscript is based is a writer for the newspapers and magazines. She was given permission by Secretary Fisher, after consultation with me, to examine all the files in respect to the Controller Bay matter—and this, under the supervision of Mr. Brown, then private secretary to the secretary of the interior. After the examination, at which she alleges she received this postscript from the hand of Mr. Brown, she prepared an elaborate article on the subject of this order and Controller Bay, which she submitted to Mr. Fisher, and which she discussed with Mr. Fisher at length, but never in the conversation did she mention the existence of the postscript. Mr. Brown, who was with her at the time and showed her the files, testifies that there was no such postscript in the papers, and that he never handled her and she never saw such a postscript there. Similar evidence is given by Mr. Carr and other custodians of the records in the interior department.

False and Malicious.

"Stronger evidence of the falsity and maliciously slanderous character of the alleged postscript could not be had. Its only significance is the light it throws on the bitterness and venom of some of those who take active part in every discussion of Alaskan issues. The intensity of their desire to besmirch all who invest in that district, and all who are officially connected with its administration, operates upon the minds of weak or depraved human instruments and prompts the fabrication of such false testimony as this postscript. I dislike to dwell upon this feature of the case, but it is so full of a lesson that ought to be taken to the heart of every patriotic citizen that I can not pass it over in silence.

"When I made this order I was aware that the condition of public opinion in reference to investments in Alaska, fanned by charges of fraud—some well founded and others of an hysterical and unjust or false character—would lead to an attack upon it and to the questioning of my motives in signing it. I remarked this when I made the order, and I was not mistaken. But a public officer, when he conceives it his duty to take affirmative action in the public interest, has no more right to allow fear of unjust criticism and attack to hinder him from taking that action than he would to allow personal and dishonest motives to affect him. It is easy in cases like this to take the course which timidity prompts, and to do nothing, but such a course does not inure to the public weal.

Would Conserve Alaska.

"I am in full sympathy with the concern of reasonable and patriotic men that the valuable resources of Alaska should not be turned over to be exploited for the profit of greedy, absorbing, monopolistic corporations or syndicates. Whatever the attempts which have been made, no one, as a matter of fact, has secured in Alaska any undue privilege or franchise not completely under the control of congress, and in all the scandal with which the public has been regaled very few specific instances of corrupt or improper attempts to acquire vested interests in Alaska have been shown by evidence that would stand the test of judicial examination. Notwithstanding this, however, I am in full agreement with the view that every care, both in administration and in legislation, must be observed to prevent the corrupt or unfair acquisition of undue privilege, franchise, or right from the government in that district. But every one must know that the resources of Alaska can never become available either to the people of Alaska or to the public of the United States unless reasonable opportunity is granted to those who would invest their money to secure a return proportionate to the risk run in the investment and reasonable under all the circumstances.

Acrimony and Again Malice.

"On the other hand, the acrimony of spirit and the intense malice that have been engendered in respect of the administration of the government in Alaska and in the consideration of measures proposed for her relief and the wanton recklessness and eagerness with which attempts have been made to besmirch the characters of high officials having to do with the Alaskan government, and even of persons not in public life, present a condition that calls for condemnation and requires that the public be warned of the demoralization that has been produced by the hysterical suspicions of good people and the unscrupulous and corrupt misrepresentations of the wicked. The helpless state to which the credulity of some and the malevolent scandal-mongering of others have brought the people in Alaska in their struggle for its development, ought to give the public pause, for until a juster and fairer view be taken investment in Alaska, which is necessary to its development, will be impossible, and honest administrators and legislators will be deterred from the advocacy and putting into operation of those policies in regard to the territory which are necessary to its progress and prosperity."

PHYSICIAN ADVISES CUTICURA REMEDIES

For Eczema. Patient's Wrist and Shin Itched Like Poison. Scratched Until They Bled. Says: "Cuticura Soap and Ointment Cured Me."

"Four years ago I had places break out on my wrist and on my shin which would itch and burn by spells, and scratching them would not seem to give any relief. When the trouble first began, my wrist and shin itched like poison. I would scratch those places until they would bleed before I could get any relief. Afterwards the places would scale over, and the flesh underneath would look red and feverish. Sometimes it would begin to itch until it would waken me from my sleep, and I would have to go through the scratching ordeal again.

"I consulted our physician in regard to it, and he pronounced it "dry eczema." I used an ointment which the doctor gave me, but it did no good. Then he advised me to try the Cuticura Remedies. As this trouble has been in our family for years, and is considered hereditary, I felt anxious to try to head it off. I got the Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills, and they seemed to be just what I needed.

"The disease was making great headway on my system until I got the Cuticura Remedies which have cleared my skin of the great pest. From the time the eczema healed four years ago, until now, I have never felt any of its pest, and I am thankful to the Cuticura Soap and Ointment which certainly cured me. I always use the Cuticura Soap for toilet, and I hope other sufferers from skin diseases will use the Cuticura Soap and Ointment." (Signed) Irven Hutchison, Three Rivers, Mich., Mar. 16, 1911.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world, a liberal sample of each, with 32-p. book on the skin and scalp will be sent free, on application to Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., Dept. 17A, Boston.

THE BOY'S LAST GUESS.

It Would Be a Miracle to Explain a Miracle.

IN the days when board schools were young a visit was paid to one of those schools by a local dignitary who had theories on the subject of Scripture lessons. He requested the headmaster to pick out a particularly dull boy and let him ask that lad a few questions. Whereupon the following dialogue ensued:

"Now, George Jones, what do you understand by a miracle?"

Boy, looking helplessly at visitor, makes no answer.

Visitor (triumphantly, to headmaster)—You see, it's as I've always maintained. Scripture must be explained and illustrated if any comprehension of its meaning is to penetrate this sort of skull. He can't tell me what a miracle is. Now hear me make him understand.

Headmaster (with sarcastic incredulity)—If you do, sir, you'll have wrought a miracle yourself. I haven't a duller boy in the school. If you'd question some of the others—

Visitor—No, no; I'll show you what I can do with this one by using common sense methods. Now, my boy, pay attention to me. You don't know what a miracle is, eh?

Boy confesses it by his silence.

"Now listen to me. Suppose you got up in the middle of the night and saw the sun shining, what should you say it was?"

Boy (promptly)—I should say it was the moon.

Visitor (argumentatively)—But you couldn't, you know, if you saw it was the sun.

Boy (doggedly)—I should see it wasn't.

Visitor (recovering from a disconcerting pause)—But if some one told you that it was the sun?

Boy (emphatically)—I should say he was a liar.

Visitor (angry at such persistent stupidity)—But suppose I told you that it was really the sun. You wouldn't dare to tell me that I was a liar, would you?

Boy (hesitates a moment, then, in accents of conviction)—I should say you was werry drunk.—Tit-Bits.

His Text.

The three-year-old son of a Methodist minister was with his mother at a gathering of ladies. At the proper time he was given a cooky. He ate it in short order and asked for another. The hostess said:

"I'll give you another if you will sing for us."

"Can't sing," was his reply, "but I know something I can say."

"That will do all right," the lady answered, expecting to hear "Twinkle, twinkle, little star," or some other nursery classic.

But the little fellow drew himself up in real Sunday school fashion and said his piece:

"God loveth a cheerful giver."

The lady gave him the cooky, and the whole company seemed to be very cheerful about it.—Harper's Magazine.

Mr. Payson and Mr. Deadbeat met on the street.

"I see you've moved again, Deadbeat," was Payson's greeting. "Where are you living now?"

"Over in the next street," rejoined Deadbeat easily. "I made the change because my new place has a high board fence in front with a sign on that exactly suits me as a warning to all my creditors not to mail me any more bills."

"What's the sign say?"

"'Post No Bills.'"—Judge.

COMMUNICATION TO THE COMMON COUNCIL.

Fort Wayne, Ind., July 24, 1911.

A meeting of the Special Committee, appointed for the purpose of investigating and co-operating with the Board of Works in regard to the garbage situation, was called last Monday night, at which meeting there were present the Board of Works, the secretary of the Board of Health and two members of the committee.

The situation was discussed by those present, and, as a result of this discussion, the following plan of work was outlined for immediate action:

One of the greatest difficulties in the disposal of the garbage is encountered by the immense amount of water carried to the crematory, where no means are provided for properly draining this material. It was suggested by Dr. Crull, secretary of the Board of Health, that if this material was in all cases wrapped in paper it would necessarily result in quite thorough draining of all water, and, further, would add fuel, which would assist in the cremation of the garbage. Another advantage would be that the garbage would be handled in a more sanitary condition, since it would be protected by the wrapping paper. A disadvantage of this arrangement would be that the material becomes more bulky and it would probably be necessary for the collectors to make more trips than they do at the present time. Dr. Crull was requested to outline a suitable ordinance which would cover the features which he desired to incorporate.

It is agreed that the efficiency of the present contractor is not high and that the man had accepted the contract at a figure so low that he can hardly carry out the terms of his contract without suffering a loss. The Board of Works thought, however, that he had accepted contract knowing fully what was to be done, and they agreed to take up the matter with the contractor and insist on the terms of the contract being carried out. Where the contractor does not remove the material the city has the power to do the work and charge the contractor with the expense of such removal.

An inspection of the crematory proved that the furnaces are in very poor condition. There are installed at the present time two furnaces, one of which is built of brick entirely and the other of steel. The brick furnace is being operated continually, but the walls and lining are in very poor condition and furnace is liable to collapse at almost any time. The steel furnace is operated only at intervals. It is very inefficient in equipment and consumes only a small amount of material at the expense of a great deal of fuel. It is considered desirable to hold this furnace for emergency purposes and proceed with as little delay as possible to build another furnace, which can be installed in the present crematory if new storage place is provided for the coal.

The above are intended for a temporary relief only. It is felt that there should be considerable study given to the latest practice, and, with this in view, the Board of Works have promised to communicate with the various manufacturers and cities regarding their methods of handling garbage. It is probable that it may be necessary to visit model installations which are not very far distant, in order to actually observe the operation of such plants, and it may be also desirable to call in the services of an expert in this line of work.

There will be additional meetings of the committee called for the purpose of continuing the investigation of this problem.

E. A. WAGNER,
HARRY C. PFLEGER.

MISS DUMONT'S SISTER

BY EVELYN VAN BUREN

"YOU ought to have three rows of ribbon, three different widths, around the bottom of the skirt," Miss Dumont said, glancing up from her sewing.

"But ribbon's so expensive, Katie—" Miss Dumont's sister looked at her husband, whose eyes raised inquisitively over the top of his evening paper. "Three rows'd be nice," she admitted, "but I can make one do."

"Would three rows be the thing, Katie; I mean New Yorkie and up-to-date?" Miss Dumont's sister's husband put down his paper and gave his attention fully to the subject.

"It would be quite the thing," Miss Dumont said. "Wouldn't you both just as soon call me Kathleen as Katie?"

"Why sure; why not? There's some class to the name you've picked out. Katie Riley was all right back there in Jacksonville, but in New York—and you look just like your new name sounds too. You know what I mean; grand, kind of." Miss Dumont's brother-in-law sat back in his chair, thoughtfully snapping a fat finger and thumb. "Now take my name. George Hicks hasn't any tone."

Little Mrs. Hicks looked at her husband. "It's an all right name, Geordie-boy. It suits little Muh."

"You get the three rows of ribbon for that skirt, like Katie—like Kathleen says." Mr. Hicks rose and fumbled in his pockets. "And you'd better get on to the New York styles all you can, now we're here."

He handed Mrs. Hicks a bill and moved to the door.

"Where you going, Geordie?" asked Mrs. Hicks anxiously.

"I'll go up to our room," he answered, "and write a letter to the firm; then I'll go out to the corner and post it."

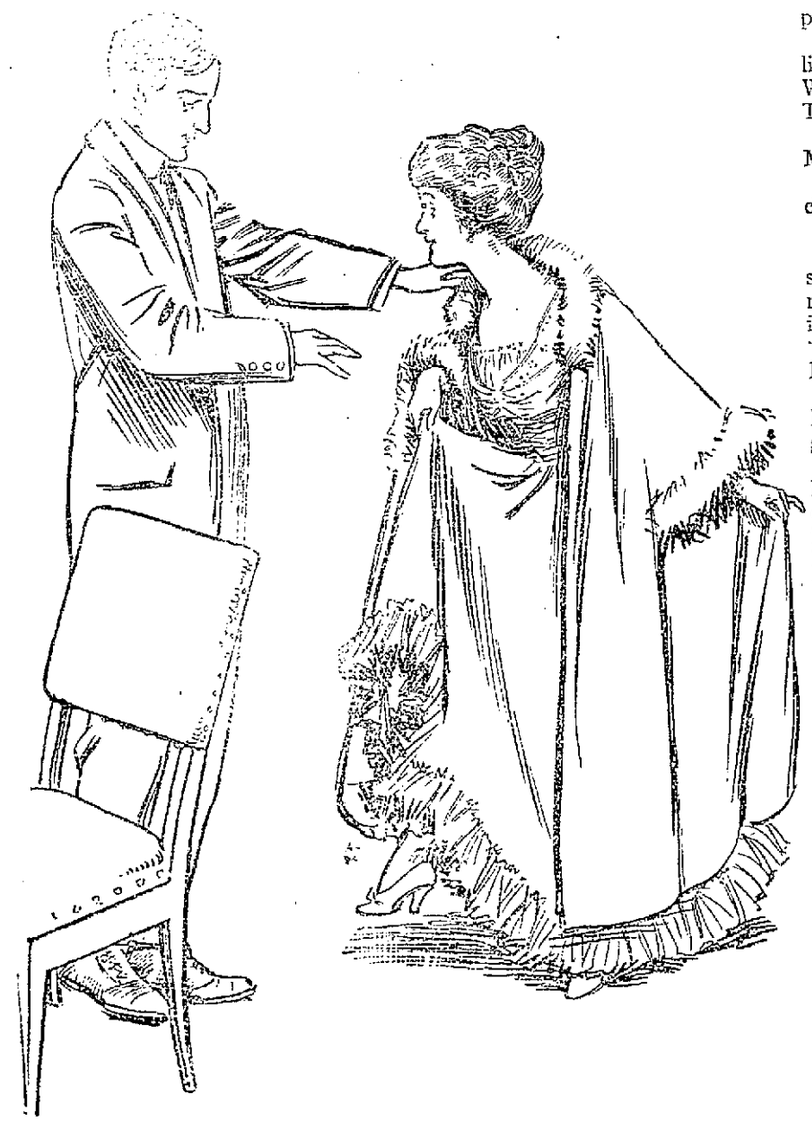
"Need me to help you write it?" Mrs. Hicks looked sweetly up at her husband.

"N-no," he said, "you go on with your dressmaking, I'll think a little about this letter."

"I always help with letters to the firm," Mrs. Hicks said as her husband went out. "I don't know much, but I can spell. Georgie can too, but he doesn't bother; you know what I mean, he doesn't take time."

"Bessie!" said Miss Dumont.

Mrs. Hicks bent over her sewing, her blond hair falling softly about her pretty little flushed face.



"SAY, IS IT YOU, BABE?"

"You are married to him, but don't pretend not to see him as he is," her sister's voice rang out sharply.

Mrs. Hicks sewed on rapidly without looking up.

"How much did he give you?"

"Whatever it is, Katie, he can't afford it I know." Mrs. Hicks drew the crumpled bill from the little chatelaine at her belt. "It's—mercy on me, it's a ten!"

Miss Dumont reached for the money.

"You can have some pumps and a pair of silk stockings, as well as the ribbon," she said more gently.

Mrs. Hicks stuck out her heavy-soled little boot, while a joyous smile conquered the guilty droop about the pretty mouth.

"You've a pretty little foot, Bessie," her sister said, "you're pretty all over, but so dowdy. He's much better dressed than you. He has a solitaire too."

Mrs. Hicks sighed.

"He had that before we were married. You see he's always been used to nice things and I never have. The nicest things I've ever had were the presents you sent me on my birthdays and Christmas. Georgie's always worn lisle socks with fancy silk clocks on the ankles and all kinds of ties and bordered handkerchiefs. He couldn't live without his cologne."

Miss Dumont shuddered.

"He ought to try," she said. "After you've once got your foot inside a silk stocking it won't be easy to wear cotton."

"Katie," Mrs. Hicks said softly, "it was good of him to bring me along on this trip so I could see you in New York. It cost a lot extra. He could have left me home in Jacksonville and had the money to spend. You know what I mean, some men would do that way."

"What ails you?" Miss Dumont cried, rising from her chair, "what in the world ails you?" she reiterated shrilly. "A pretty little young thing like you married to a man twice your age! You'd have let him leave you at home, wouldn't you?"

Tears stole down Mrs. Hicks' cheeks.

"Don't cry on your new skirt and spoil it before it's finished." Miss Dumont folded up the little bodice she was making to go with the new skirt and placed it in a drawer of her chiffonnier. "You needn't have married him just because father died," she said. "You could have come on here to me. I'd have got you a position as nice as mine."

"We were engaged before father died," sobbed Mrs. Hicks softly. "There were plenty of girls wanted George."

Miss Dumont turned her face, hiding a little unpleasant smile. She went to her wardrobe and from it brought a scented silken rustling mass, swathed in white wrapping.

"The lady whose amanuensis I am," she said, removing the cover and revealing a golden spangled gown, "gave me this, after she had worn it once!"

Mrs. Hicks sprang up with a pleasurable little cry. She caught at the dress, and holding it before her, whirled to the mirror.

"Slip it on, Bessie." Miss Dumont approached her sister, pulling at the fastenings of her blouse and skirt. "You could have had such things. Just think how I am taken abroad mostly every year. I don't miss much, I can tell you. Mrs. Porter thinks everything of me. I don't work awfully hard either, just keep my wits about me and use a little diplomacy. This," Miss Dumont flashed the ruby she wore upon her left hand, "well, it's Mr. Porter's private secretary I'm engaged to. Arthur's a climber and we may wait five years yet. Then, I shall only be thirty."

Miss Dumont slipped the spangled frock over her sister's yellow head and began hooking it.

"I'd like to have you here in New York with me. I'd polish you up. You're pretty, and quick at getting on to things."

Mrs. Hicks threw out her bare arms with a wondering cry at her lovely shining image in the mirror. Her sister tossed her some stilted-heeled gold slippers from a drawer of the chiffonier. Mrs. Hicks slipped into them. The slippers raised her and lifted the dress from the floor. She began swaying to and fro, humming softly and eyeing her reflection, whirled round in a mad little waltz. Waving her arms above her head she gavotted about, gold slippers flashing, with little kicks from out of the billowy silk and spangles.

She suddenly halted, breathless, flushed, her eyes glowing under her yellow hair, disheveled.

"Oh, Geordie," she breathed shyly.

Mr. Hicks's pompous person filled the doorway. Wonder and admiration dimpled his round, fat face.

His wife swept him a courtesy.

Hicks approached her with open arms.

"Don't spoil my dress!" cried Miss Dumont. "Wait until she's out of it!"

"How much is one like that—Katie—Kathleen?" Mr. Hicks asked, as he paused.

Miss Dumont shrugged her shoulders.

"Oh, I can imagine," he said, looking hard at the gown, over his eye-glasses. "A couple of hundred, anyhow."

Mrs. Hicks gasped. She shot a quick glance toward her sister. George showed to some advantage there, mentioning the enormous value of a thing like that, without flinching.

"I ought to have been rich," he said, "my tastes run that way—always did." He plucked a raveling from his coat sleeve, pulled his hat over his eyes and, hands in his pockets, took a turn about the room. "My mother's maiden name was Van Pelt," he said, stopping and looking squarely at Miss Dumont. "Puts Hicks to the blush, don't it?" He laughed and looked at his wife. "I've been thinking things over. Try to remember yourself after this as Mrs. Van Pelt. The Hickses are nixy from now on."

Miss Dumont, leaning against the wall with arms folded, narrowed her eyes in a puzzled regard of the man.

"Georgie!" Mrs. Hicks spoke in her little gasping voice, "we couldn't do that! What would they say in Jacksonville? That we're crazy!"

"They ought to see you now," grinned Mr. Hicks, "hadn't they, Kathleen?"

"Why not let her wear the family jewels?" said his sister-in-law.

"Jewels?"

Miss Dumont's eyes were fixed upon the solitaire adorning his plump left hand. He raised it, spreading out and eyeing admiringly each pudgy, well-manicured finger. "I bought that ring with the first money I ever saved," he said.

"When he was only twenty-one," added Mrs. Hicks, "and he just loves it. He's got such a nice hand for a ring."

Mr. Hicks put the hand in his pocket, but looking up, he saw the smile he constantly endeavored to avoid bringing to his sister-in-law's face. He withdrew his hand from his pocket and gazed for a second again, rapturously, uncertainly, at the jewel. Then he removed it slowly.

"What finger will it fit, girlie?" He moved toward Mrs. Hicks.

She spread out both hands, looking from him to her sister.

"Isn't he just the best ever?" she cooed as he fitted on the ring.

"The ring can be cut down to fit her," Miss Dumont said.

"Have that done to-morrow," agreed Mr. Hicks.

He stood looking from one to the other, his eyes lingering upon his sister-in-law, seeking some sign of her approval.

She yawned.

"I have to be up early to-morrow," she said. "Mrs. Porter wants some invitations gotten up."

"Good-night," said Mr. Hicks, "I'll go on up to our room."

"I'm coming, Geordie," called his wife, "as soon as I take off Katie's dress."

Miss Dumont stood, still leaning against the wall, with folded arms, regarding her sister.

"How can you tolerate him, Bessie?" she asked harshly.

Mrs. Hicks looked back at her sister with frightened eyes.

"Tolerate George? Why, Katie, he's awfully good to me. Doesn't he do everything he thinks you think he ought to? Even about his name——"

"Yes," said Miss Dumont, "he's a perfect fool. Left alone you might change yours, or even he alone could take on another name; but the two of you and back there in Jacksonville with everyone knowing, it's absurd. What does it matter, anyway, there?"

"I won't let him do it," Mrs. Hicks said softly, struggling with the hooks on the gown.

"Look here!" Her sister approached and caught her by the shoulder. "You needn't go back to Jacksonville with him. Let him go alone when his business here is finished. Ask to stay on with me a little longer. I'll get him to leave you. Then—" Miss Dumont whirled her sister, with the eager, scared little face, round and began unfastening the gown, "it'll be easy to get rid of him, Bess. I can manage it for you, dear. You poor little pretty thing! I can't bear to leave my sister to such a fate; its my duty not to—oh, Bess——"

Bessie Hicks looked back into her sister's face. A glow of ambitious pride, of longing and love lit it almost maternally. Tears stood in the handsome dark eyes. Bessie, reaching up her arms, was clasped in her sister's.

"He can't buy things for you, or take you places, or give you your due. He has hardly enough for himself. It nearly killed him to part with that ring and of course he'll want it back. And I know he can't afford the miserable ten dollars. It would buy him some shoes or ties or something, and naturally all this is continually in your mind and on your conscience, child, and it hurts you and doesn't help him."

Miss Dumont folded her golden spangled gown, wrapping it up carefully, while the little disrobed figure of her sister stood huddled, trembling, listening.

"I'll get you a position. There are others like mine. You'll have lovely clothes; you'll go to places—abroad with me this summer, if I have to draw my own money out of the bank to take you. Think of it, Bessie——"

"Katie, listen," Bessie's teeth were chattering nervously. She caught up her blouse from the floor. "This is a big thing to decide on all at once. I'll have to—you know what I mean—think it over, like. I—I couldn't say to-night I'll do it or that I won't. Where's my old skirt? George has been all I've had for——"

"Certainly, think it over." Miss Dumont caught up the old skirt and slipped it over her sister's head. "I know he's gotten to be a habit. I understand all that."

Miss Dumont kissed her sister.

"Don't go to him with that face. He'll guess I've said something."

"I wouldn't let him suspect." Mrs. Hicks tried to smile, "You've always been mighty good to me too, Katie, remembering me when we've been parted so most all our lives, every birthday and Christmas——"

"Go to bed." Miss Dumont led her to the door. "To-morrow when I get back here, we'll go and buy the ribbon and things. I'll keep the ten dollars in my purse, then no one can borrow it back."

"Bessie!" From the floor above came the sleepy voice of Mr. Hicks.

"He'll have all the lodgers awake and the landlady blaming me, Bessie," Miss Dumont pushed her toward the stairs.

"Coming, George," Mrs. Hicks called softly.

"KATIE RILEY WAS ALL RIGHT BACK THERE IN JACKSONVILLE, BUT IN NEW YORK—"

folding away lovingly the gown of her sister they were working on. She tossed the pillows from her divan, converting it into a bed and began her nightly toilet. She brushed her hair until it shone ruddily; plaited it and wound it in two braids about her head.

"A—say, Kathleen." It was the voice of Mr. Hicks accompanied by a soft, persistent tapping on the door.

"What is it?" called Kathleen.

"Just open the door a minute, will you?" Mr. Hicks asked.

She slipped to the door and opened it.

"Mind my coming in?" he pushed forward into the room, himself closing the door. "I've got Bessie a-crying," he said, pulling at the cords of his bath robe. "She's a nervous little thing and I knew you'd understand the situation better and could explain it to her. Now it's here—" He sat down, folding his robe about his legs, and leaned forward.

Miss Dumont returned slowly to the center of the room, watching him wonderingly.

"I'm never going back to Jacksonville." He gazed quickly over his eye-glasses, to note the effect of his words. "Never any more for muh, nixy."

Miss Dumont remained unmoved, waiting.

"New York's a great big town with plenty of room and lots of money in it and yours truly intends to have his share of both. I wrote to my firm to-night and sent my resignation; told 'em I'd finish this business here for 'em and then close out. I begin life all over again, in a bigger town, with bigger ideas, in a bigger way and a new name. They's some tone to Van Pelt. As much difference between it and Hicks, as between Katie Riley and Kathleen Dumont. You see I feel just like you do about things, isn't that right?"

Miss Dumont looked down into the round eyes staring up at her over the eye-glasses.

"It's such a big move—" she said helplessly.

"Sure it's a big one," he agreed. "It looks bigger to a woman like little Bessie, too. Now I've got five hundred dollars in the Jacksonville Bank, which I'm drawing out. I guess we shan't starve on that before I get a new job here."

He spread out his pudgy hand with habitual admiring satisfaction. The solitaire he had given to his wife was back upon it.

"Oh, yes," he added, "Bess made me have my ring back. But out of the five hundred plunks I'm going to buy her one, a neat little sparkler for her little finger."

"And Bessie's crying about all this?" said Miss Dumont.

Mr. Hicks' fat forehead puckered in a frown.

"I wish Bess was a little more like you," he mused. "I said as much, and she braced up; sat up and looked at me with her eyes like dollars. Now don't you see I'm wise?"

Miss Dumont's firm straight shoulders twitched in something like a shudder.

"I'll tell you," she said, "it's so late, suppose we leave the matter until to-morrow?"

"Well, good heavens," Mr. Hicks got up, "you see I'm right, don't you? I was sure you'd back me up. Your ideas and mine are about alike, it seems to me."

"Does it?" Miss Dumont stepped to the door and opened it. "All right," she said, "we'll talk it over to-morrow. Good-night."

Mr. Hicks went out reluctantly.

"Ta-ta," he said, "you'll talk to Bess to-morrow, too."

Miss Dumont re-closed and locked her door. She paused and with despairing gesture, sank into a chair.

"Oh!" she sobbed, "if Bessie can only get him back to Jacksonville. Poor little Bess——"

"Here, open the door again! Open this damn'd door—" It was the wild, excited voice of Mr. Hicks.

He shook the door with mumblings and oaths. Miss Dumont hurried to unlock it.

"Here—" the man burst in wildly, waving a sheet of paper, "now see what you've done with your high-falutin' ideas, Kate Riley. She's gone—gone back to Jacksonville—gone alone—gone back—to—" Mr. Hicks sobbed, waving the paper and drawing his bath-robe about him wildly, "gone back to live by little Geordie's grave. O my God——"

"Hush," Miss Dumont pleaded, "please try not to arouse the house."

She took the paper from him.

"It's you," he went on, "you and your ideas that's done it. She's gone alone—" He rushed to the door and returned frantically. "She's got the train and there ain't another till day-time. Once we'd planned to go back on the train she's got and she took her return ticket from my pocket——"

"Keep quiet and let me read what she says," Miss Dumont begged.

"She says how well I'll get on without her. How I can make plenty for one, but not for two. How she handicaps me. How this city is the place for folks like me and you, but not for her. She's contented with Jacksonville—where little Geordie was born and died and is buried, and she's gone—" He sank sobbing into a chair.

Miss Dumont tried to read the little tear-stained note.

"Geordie

"You're not to worry about me one bit. I can't keep you down any longer; with Katie to help you there's not anything you can't do. I haven't liked to tell you, but I hate New York and I am going home. I'll board just the same with old Mrs. Kelly and I can earn enough to pay it by sewing. I want to be near little Geordie——"

"It's your doings," Mr. Hicks broke out again, rising. "She'll go back there alone and—why, somebody'll marry her."

He rushed back to the door. "They's a train in the morning early. I'll go and get dressed. It's all your doing—" He pulled up sharply.

In the hall, a little figure, hat and veil askew, hair tumbling down, drooped forlornly.

"I missed the train."

"O my God! What good luck!" Mr. Hicks caught the little figure frantically to him. "We'll catch the seven o'clock in the morning."

"Geordie!" Mrs. Hicks dropped her hand-bag, and threw her arms about her husband's neck, "oh, Geordie!"

Over his shoulder she looked at her sister.

"Katie, dear, I—I love him." Mr. Hicks missed the note of apology in his wife's sobbing voice.

"Of course you do, dear," Miss Dumont stepped into the hall and patted Mrs. Hicks's little hand that rested upon her husband's shoulder, "and he loves you and needs you. Knock on my door to say good-by before your train goes in the morning."

"Yes, Katie," Mrs. Hicks whispered shyly, as Mr. Hicks drew her up the stairs.

"I'll say good-by now." Mr. Hicks turned and shook his sister-in-law's hand warmly. "Good luck!"

"Thank you," she answered.

She slipped again into her room and locked the door.

"I was mistaken. I couldn't make my sister as happy as he does." She reached out and switched off the light. "I wonder if I am anything like Hicks," she whispered.

Chicago Market.

Chicago, Ill., July 27.—With the Morocco situation appearing less acute, the wheat market today became easy. Moreover, there were signs of larger world's shipments this week. Dispatches from India, too, brought word that rain had fallen in the provinces and also in the Punjab. In addition current gossip regarding the American spring wheat crop inclined to favor the bear side. It was asserted that the fields have sufficient moisture for the present and although black rust was doing some damage an accurate estimate of the actual harm had been found difficult. Opening prices were the same as last night to ½c down. September started ¼c to ⅝c lower at 88c to 88⅛c and declined to 87¾@87⅞c.

Considerable selling pressure developed in the corn pit. A leading authority was quoted as declaring the crop in good condition, and predicting that if no setback occurred from now on a large yield might be expected. September opened unchanged at 62⅜c, but sagged to 62⅛c.

Oats weakened with other grain and because both in quality and quantity the harvest was turning out better than expected several weeks ago. September started a shade to ⅛@⅜c off at 39⅝@39¾c and fell to 39⅛c.

Demand was less urgent for hog products, and there was plentiful selling by packers. Initial transactions were 5c lower to 2½c up, with September deliv-ery $16.90 for pork, $8.57½ for lard and $8.70 for ribs.

STOCKS AND BONDS.

The Day on Wall Street.

New York, July 27.—A slightly lower level prevailed at the opening of the stock market today. Losses were fractional, being heaviest among the northwestern railroad group. St. Paul lost ⅝ and Great Northern preferred ½. The only gains were made by Consolidated Gas, which advanced a point, Denver & Rio Grande ¾ and American Smelting preferred ½.

Heavy buying of Reading was the feature of the first hour's trading. The stock advanced to 160¼, its highest price for more than two months. The general list improved after the opening and most of the initial losses were recovered. Bethlehem Steel, common and preferred and St. Louis & Southwestern preferred gained a point each.

Trading was less active and variations in prices of stocks during the morning were small. For the third successive day buying of the coalers was conspicuous. Trading in Reading during the early part of the session constituted more than one third of the total and with Lehigh Valley which became increasingly active and strong in the second hour, overshadowed the remainder of the list. Board room gossip connected the name of a prominent trader who is reported to have lost heavily in the cotton market with the recent selling of stocks particularly Reading. This stock was offered so liberally today that it fell back to yesterday's closing after its early advance. Lehigh Valley rose 1⅜ and Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste Marie a point. Bonds were steady.

The market receded abruptly during the noon hour, the Harriman issues and St. Paul, Canadian Pacific and Virginia-Carolina Chemical preferred losing 1 to 5 points, with 1 point losses in Great Northern preferred, Great Northern Ore Certificates, New York Central, Norfolk & Western and St. Louis & San Francisco second preferred. Some other stocks were fractionally lower.

The selling movement assumed the proportions of a bear raid in the afternoon and prices gave way rapidly. The bear party professed alarm at cabled reports of Premier Asquith's speech on the Moroccan controversy but their attack apparently did not uncover a large amount of long stock. Canadian Pacific, the heaviest loser among the leading issues, declined 2⅝. Union Pacific's loss reached 2⅛. Southern Pacific fell back 2 and United States Steel, Louisville & Nashville, Atlantic Coast Line, Erie common and first preferred, Westinghouse Electric and American Sugar a point or more each.

The market closed heavy. Partial recovery was made in the last hour. Reading, Union Pacific and the Hill stocks all selling fractionally above the low range, but the list as a whole registered net losses.

FICTION BY THE BEST WRITERS

MISS DUMONT'S SISTER

BY EVELYN VAN BUREN

"YOU ought to have three rows of ribbon, three different widths, around the bottom of the skirt," Miss Dumont said, glancing up from her sewing.

"But ribbon's so expensive, Katie—" Miss Dumont's sister looked at her husband, whose eyes raised inquisitively over the top of his evening paper. "Three rows'd be nice," she admitted, "but I can make one do."

"Would three rows be the thing, Katie; I mean New Yorkie and up-to-date?" Miss Dumont's sister's husband put down his paper and gave his attention fully to the subject.

"It would be quite the thing," Miss Dumont said. "Wouldn't you both just as soon call me Kathleen as Katie?"

"Why sure; why not? There's some class to the name you've picked out. Katie Riley was all right back there in Jacksonville, but in New York—and you look just like your new name sounds too. You know what I mean; grand, kind of." Miss Dumont's brother-in-law sat back in his chair, thoughtfully snapping a fat finger and thumb. "Now take my name. George Hicks hasn't any tone."

Little Mrs. Hicks looked at her husband. "It's an all right name, Geordie-boy. It suits little Muh."

"You get the three rows of ribbon for that skirt, like Katie—like Kathleen says." Mr. Hicks rose and fumbled in his pockets. "And you'd better get on to the New York styles all you can, now we're here."

He handed Mrs. Hicks a bill and moved to the door.

"Where you going, Geordie?" asked Mrs. Hicks anxiously.

"I'll go up to our room," he answered, "and write a letter to the firm; then I'll go out to the corner and post it."

"Need me to help you write it?" Mrs. Hicks looked sweetly up at her husband.

"N-no," he said, "you go on with your dressmaking. I'll think a little about this letter."

"I always help with letters to the firm," Mrs. Hicks said as her husband went out. "I don't know much, but I can spell. Georgie can too, but he doesn't bother; you know what I mean, he doesn't take time."

"Bessie!" said Miss Dumont.

Mrs. Hicks bent over her sewing, her blond hair falling softly about her pretty little flushed face.

"You are married to him, but don't pretend not to see him as he is," her sister's voice rang out sharply.

Mrs. Hicks sewed on rapidly without looking up.

"How much did he give you?"

"Whatever it is, Katie, he can't afford it I know." Mrs. Hicks drew the crumpled bill from the little chatelaine at her belt. "It's—mercy on me, it's a ten!"

Miss Dumont reached for the money.

"You can have some pumps and a pair of silk stockings, as well as the ribbon," she said more gently.

Mrs. Hicks stuck out her heavy-soled little boot, while a joyous smile conquered the guilty droop about the pretty mouth.

"You've a pretty little foot, Bessie," her sister said, "you're pretty all over, but so dowdy. He's much better dressed than you. He has a solitaire too."

Mrs. Hicks sighed.

"He had that before we were married. You see he's always been used to nice things and I never have. The nicest things I've ever had were the presents you sent me on my birthdays and Christmas. Georgie's always worn lisle socks with fancy silk clocks on the ankles and all kinds of ties and bordered handkerchiefs. He couldn't live without his cologne."

Miss Dumont shuddered.

"He ought to try," she said. "After you've once got your foot inside a silk stocking it won't be easy to wear cotton."

"Katie," Mrs. Hicks said softly, "it was good of him to bring me along on this trip so I could see you in New York. It cost a lot extra. He could have left me home in Jacksonville and had the money to spend. You know what I mean, some men would do that way."

"What ails you?" Miss Dumont cried, rising from her chair, "what in the world ails you?" she reiterated shrilly. "A pretty little young thing like you married to a man twice your age! You'd have let him leave you at home, wouldn't you?"

Tears stole down Mrs. Hicks' cheeks.

"Don't cry on your new skirt and spoil it before it's finished." Miss Dumont folded up the little bodice she was making to go with the new skirt and placed it in a drawer of her chiffonnier. "You needn't have married him just because father died," she said. "You could have come on here to me. I'd have got you a position as nice as mine."

"We were engaged before father died," sobbed Mrs. Hicks softly. "There were plenty of girls wanted George."

Miss Dumont turned her face, hiding a little unpleasant smile. She went to her wardrobe and from it brought a scented silken rustling mass, swathed in white wrapping.

"The lady whose amanuensis I am," she said, removing the cover and revealing a golden spangled gown, "gave me this, after she had worn it once!"

Mrs. Hicks sprang up with a pleasurable little cry. She caught at the dress, and holding it before her, whirled to the mirror.

"Slip it on, Bessie." Miss Dumont approached her sister, pulling at the fastenings of her blouse and skirt. "You could have had such things. Just think how I am taken abroad mostly every year. I don't miss much, I can tell you. Mrs. Porter thinks everything of me. I don't work awfully hard either, just keep my wits about me and use a little diplomacy. This," Miss Dumont flashed the ruby she wore upon her left hand, "well, it's Mr. Porter's private secretary I'm engaged to. Arthur's a climber and we may wait five years yet. Then, I shall only be thirty."

Miss Dumont slipped the spangled frock over her sister's yellow head and began hooking it.

"I'd like to have you here in New York with me. I'd polish you up. You're pretty, and quick at getting on to things."

Mrs. Hicks threw out her bare arms with a wondering cry at her lovely shining image in the mirror. Her sister tossed her some stilted-heeled gold slippers from a drawer of the chiffonier. Mrs. Hicks slipped into them. The slippers raised her and lifted the dress from the floor. She began swaying to and fro, humming softly and eyeing her reflection, whirled round in a mad little waltz. Waving her arms above her head she gavotted about, gold slippers flashing, with little kicks from out of the billowy silk and spangles.

She suddenly halted, breathless, flushed, her eyes glowing under her yellow hair, disheveled.

"Oh, Geordie," she breathed shyly.

Mr. Hicks's pompous person filled the doorway. Wonder and admiration dimpled his round, fat face.

"Say, is it you, babe?" he asked, pushing his hat to the back of his head.

His wife swept him a courtesy.

Hicks approached her with open arms.

"Don't spoil my dress!" cried Miss Dumont. "Wait until she's out of it!"

"How much is one like that—Katie—Kathleen?" Mr. Hicks asked, as he paused.

Miss Dumont shrugged her shoulders.

"Oh, I can imagine," he said, looking hard at the gown, over his eye-glasses. "A couple of hundred, anyhow."

Mrs. Hicks gasped. She shot a quick glance toward her sister. George showed to some advantage there, mentioning the enormous value of a thing like that, without flinching.

"I ought to have been rich," he said, "my tastes run that way—always did." He plucked a raveling from his coat sleeve, pulled his hat over his eyes and, hands in his pockets, took a turn about the room. "My mother's maiden name was Van Pelt," he said, stopping and looking squarely at Miss Dumont. "Puts Hicks to the blush, don't it?" He laughed and looked at his wife. "I've been thinking things over. Try to remember yourself after this as Mrs. Van Pelt. The Hickses are nixy from now on."

Miss Dumont, leaning against the wall with arms folded, narrowed her eyes in a puzzled regard of the man.

"Georgie!" Mrs. Hicks spoke in her little gasping voice, "we couldn't do that! What would they say in Jacksonville? That we're crazy!"

"They ought to see you now," grinned Mr. Hicks, "hadn't they, Kathleen?"

"Why not let her wear the family jewels?" said his sister-in-law.

"Jewels?"

Miss Dumont's eyes were fixed upon the solitaire adorning his plump left hand. He raised it, spreading out and eyeing admiringly each pudgy, well-manicured finger. "I bought that ring with the first money I ever saved," he said.

"When he was only twenty-one," added Mrs. Hicks, "and he just loves it. He's got such a nice hand for a ring."

Mr. Hicks put the hand in his pocket, but looking up, he saw the smile he constantly endeavored to avoid bringing to his sister-in-law's face. He withdrew his hand from his pocket and gazed for a second again, rapturously, uncertainly, at the jewel. Then he removed it slowly.

"What finger will it fit, girlie?" He moved toward Mrs. Hicks.

She spread out both hands, looking from him to her sister.

"Isn't he just the best ever?" she cooed as he fitted on the ring.

"The ring can be cut down to fit her," Miss Dumont said.

"Have that done to-morrow," agreed Mr. Hicks.

He stood looking from one to the other, his eyes lingering upon his sister-in-law, seeking some sign of her approval.

She yawned.

"I have to be up early to-morrow," she said. "Mrs. Porter wants some invitations gotten up."

"Good-night," said Mr. Hicks, "I'll go on up to our room."

"I'm coming, Geordie," called his wife, "as soon as I take off Katie's dress."

Miss Dumont stood, still leaning against the wall, with folded arms, regarding her sister.

"How can you tolerate him, Bessie?" she asked harshly.

Mrs. Hicks looked back at her sister with frightened eyes.

"Tolerate George? Why, Katie, he's awfully good to me. Doesn't he do everything he thinks you think he ought to? Even about his name——"

"Yes," said Miss Dumont, "he's a perfect fool. Left alone you might change yours, or even he alone could take on another name: but the two of you and back there in Jacksonville with everyone knowing, it's absurd. What does it matter, anyway, there?"

"I won't let him do it," Mrs. Hicks said softly, struggling with the hooks on the gown.

"Look here!" Her sister approached and caught her by the shoulder. "You needn't go back to Jacksonville with him. Let him go alone when his business here is finished. Ask to stay on with me a little longer. I'll get him to leave you. Then—" Miss Dumont whirled her sister, with the eager, scared little face, round and began unfastening the gown, "it'll be easy to get rid of him, Bess. I can manage it for you, dear. You poor little pretty thing! I can't bear to leave my sister to such a fate; its my duty not to—oh, Bess——"

Bessie Hicks looked back into her sister's face. A glow of ambitious pride, of longing and love lit it almost maternally. Tears stood in the handsome dark eyes. Bessie, reaching up her arms, was clasped in her sister's.

"He can't buy things for you, or take you places, or give you your due. He has hardly enough for himself. It nearly killed him to part with that ring and of course he'll want it back. And I know he can't afford the miserable ten dollars. It would buy him some shoes or ties or something, and naturally all this is continually in your mind and on your conscience, child, and it hurts you and doesn't help him."

Miss Dumont folded her golden spangled gown, wrapping it up carefully, while the little disrobed figure of her sister stood huddled, trembling, listening.

"I'll get you a position. There are others like mine. You'll have lovely clothes; you'll go to places—abroad with me this summer, if I have to draw my own money out of the bank to take you. Think of it, Bessie——"

"Katie, listen," Bessie's teeth were chattering nervously. She caught up her blouse from the floor. "This is a big thing to decide on all at once. I'll have to—you know what I mean—think it over, like. I—I couldn't say to-night I'll do it or that I won't. Where's my old skirt? George has been all I've had for——"

"Certainly, think it over." Miss Dumont caught up the old skirt and slipped it over her sister's head. "I know he's gotten to be a habit. I understand all that."

Miss Dumont kissed her sister.

"Don't go to him with that face. He'll guess I've said something."

"I wouldn't let him suspect." Mrs. Hicks tried to smile, "You've always been mighty good to me too, Katie, remembering me when we've been parted so most all our lives, every birthday and Christmas——"

"Go to bed." Miss Dumont led her to the door. "To-morrow when I get back here, we'll go and buy the ribbon and things. I'll keep the ten dollars in my purse, then no one can borrow it back."

"Bessie!" From the floor above came the sleepy voice of Mr. Hicks.

"He'll have all the lodgers awake and the landlady blaming me, Bessie," Miss Dumont pushed her toward the stairs.

"Coming, George," Mrs. Hicks called softly.

Miss Dumont slipped back into her room, closing and locking her door. She moved about thoughtfully, tidying the room, folding away lovingly the gown of her sister they were working on. She tossed the pillows from her divan, converting it into a bed and began her nightly toilet. She brushed her hair until it shone ruddily; plaited it and wound it in two braids about her head.

"A—say, Kathleen." It was the voice of Mr. Hicks accompanied by a soft, persistent tapping on the door.

"What is it?" called Kathleen.

"Just open the door a minute, will you?" Mr. Hicks asked.

She slipped to the door and opened it.

"Mind my coming in?" he pushed forward into the room, himself closing the door. "I've got Bessie a-crying," he said, pulling at the cords of his bath robe. "She's a nervous little thing and I knew you'd understand the situation better and could explain it to her. Now it's here—" He sat down, folding his robe about his legs, and leaned forward.

Miss Dumont returned slowly to the center of the room, watching him wonderingly.

"I'm never going back to Jacksonville." He gazed quickly over his eye-glasses, to note the effect of his words. "Never any more for muh, nixy."

Miss Dumont remained unmoved, waiting.

"New York's a great big town with plenty of room and lots of money in it and yours truly intends to have his share of both. I wrote to my firm to-night and sent my resignation; told 'em I'd finish this business here for 'em and then close out. I begin life all over again, in a bigger town, with bigger ideas, in a bigger way and a new name. They's some tone to Van Pelt. As much difference between it and Hicks, as between Katie Riley and Kathleen Dumont. You see I feel just like you do about things, isn't that right?"

Miss Dumont looked down into the round eyes staring up at her over the eye-glasses.

"It's such a big move—" she said helplessly.

"Sure it's a big one," he agreed. "It looks bigger to a woman like little Bessie, too. Now I've got five hundred dollars in the Jacksonville Bank, which I'm drawing out. I guess we shan't starve on that before I get a new job here."

He spread out his pudgy hand with habitual admiring satisfaction. The solitaire he had given to his wife was back upon it.

"Oh, yes," he added, "Bess made me have my ring back. But out of the five hundred plunks I'm going to buy her one, a neat little sparkler for her little finger."

"And Bessie's crying about all this?" said Miss Dumont.

Mr. Hicks' fat forehead puckered in a frown.

"I wish Bess was a little more like you," he mused. "I said as much, and she braced up; sat up and looked at me with her eyes like dollars. Now don't you see I'm wise?"

Miss Dumont's firm straight shoulders twitched in something like a shudder.

"I'll tell you," she said, "it's so late, suppose we leave the matter until to-morrow?"

"Well, good heavens," Mr. Hicks got up, "you see I'm right, don't you? I was sure you'd back me up. Your ideas and mine are about alike, it seems to me."

"Does it?" Miss Dumont stepped to the door and opened it. "All right," she said, "we'll talk it over to-morrow. Good-night."

Mr. Hicks went out reluctantly.

"Ta-ta," he said, "you'll talk to Bess to-morrow, too."

Miss Dumont re-closed and locked her door. She paused and with despairing gesture, sank into a chair.

"Oh!" she sobbed, "if Bessie can only get him back to Jacksonville. Poor little Bess——"

"Here, open the door again! Open this damn'd door—" It was the wild, excited voice of Mr. Hicks.

He shook the door with mumblings and oaths. Miss Dumont hurried to unlock it.

"Here—" the man burst in wildly, waving a sheet of paper, "now see what you've done with your high-falutin' ideas, Kate Riley. She's gone—gone back to Jacksonville—gone alone—gone back—to—" Mr. Hicks sobbed, waving the paper and drawing his bath-robe about him wildly, "gone back to live by little Geordie's grave. O my God——"

"Hush," Miss Dumont pleaded, "please try not to arouse the house.'

She took the paper from him.

"It's you," he went on, "you and your ideas that's done it. She's gone alone—" He rushed to the door and returned frantically. "She's got the train and there ain't another till day-time. Once we'd planned to go back on the train she's got and she took her return ticket from my pocket——"

"Keep quiet and let me read what she says," Miss Dumont begged.

"She says how well I'll get on without her. How I can make plenty for one, but not for two. How she handicaps me. How this city is the place for folks like me and you, but not for her. She's contented with Jacksonville—where little Geordie was born and died and is buried, and she's gone—" He sank sobbing into a chair.

Miss Dumont tried to read the little tear-stained note.

"Geordie

"You're not to worry about me one bit. I can't keep you down any longer; with Katie to help you there's not anything you can't do. I haven't liked to tell you, but I hate New York and I am going home. I'll board just the same with old Mrs. Kelly and I can earn enough to pay it by sewing. I want to be near little Geordie——"

"It's your doings," Mr. Hicks broke out again, rising. "She'll go back there alone and—why, somebody'll marry her."

He rushed back to the door. "They's a train in the morning early. I'll go and get dressed. It's all your doing—" He pulled up sharply.

In the hall, a little figure, hat and veil askew, hair tumbling down, drooped forlornly.

"I missed the train."

"O my God! What good luck!" Mr. Hicks caught the little figure frantically to him. "We'll catch the seven o'clock in the morning."

"Geordie!" Mrs. Hicks dropped her hand-bag, and threw her arms about her husband's neck, "oh, Geordie!"

Over his shoulder she looked at her sister.

"Katie, dear, I—I love him." Mr. Hicks missed the note of apology in his wife's sobbing voice.

"Of course you do, dear," Miss Dumont stepped into the hall and patted Mrs. Hicks's little hand that rested upon her husband's shoulder, "and he loves you and needs you. Knock on my door to say good-by before your train goes in the morning."

"Yes, Katie," Mrs. Hicks whispered shyly, as Mr. Hicks drew her up the stairs.

"I'll say good-by now." Mr. Hicks turned and shook his sister-in-law's hand warmly. "Good luck!"

"Thank you," she answered.

She slipped again into her room and locked the door.

"I was mistaken. I couldn't make my sister as happy as he does." She reached out and switched off the light. "I wonder if I am anything like Hicks," she whispered.

"KATIE RILEY WAS ALL RIGHT BACK THERE IN JACKSONVILLE, BUT IN NEW YORK—"

"SAY, IS IT YOU, BABE?"

THE MARKETS

GRAIN AND PROVISIONS.

Chicago Market.

Chicago, Ill., July 27.—With the Morocco situation appearing less acute, the wheat market today became easy. Moreover, there were signs of larger world's shipments this week. Dispatches from India, too, brought word that rain had fallen in the provinces and also in the Punjab. In addition current gossip regarding the American spring wheat crop inclined to favor the bear side. It was asserted that the fields have sufficient moisture for the present and although black rust was doing some damage an accurate estimate of the actual harm had been found difficult. Opening prices were the same as last night to ½c down. September started ¼c to ⅜c lower at 88c to 88⅛c and declined to 87⅜@87⅝c.

Considerable selling pressure developed in the corn pit. A leading authority was quoted as declaring the crop in good condition, and predicting that if no setback occurred from now on a large yield might be expected. September opened unchanged at 62⅜c, but sagged to 62¾c.

Oats weakened with other grain and because both in quality and quantity the harvest was turning out better than expected several weeks ago. September started a shade to ¼@⅜c off at 38⅝@39⅜c and fell to 39½c.

Demand was less urgent for hog products, and there was plentiful selling by packers. Initial transactions were 5c lower to 2½c up, with September delivery $16.90 for pork, $8.57½ for lard and $8.70 for ribs.

STOCKS AND BONDS.

The Day on Wall Street.

New York, July 27.—A slightly lower level prevailed at the opening of the stock market today. Losses were fractional, being heaviest among the northwestern railroad group. St. Paul lost ⅝ and Great Northern preferred ½. The only gains were made by Consolidated Gas, which advanced a point, Denver & Rio Grande ⅝ and American Smelting preferred ½.

Heavy buying of Reading was the feature of the first hour's trading. The stock advanced to 160¼, its highest price for more than two months. The general list improved after the opening and most of the initial losses were recovered. Bethlehem Steel, common and preferred and St. Louis & Southwestern preferred gained a point each.

Trading was less active and variations in prices of stocks during the morning were small. For the third successive day buying of the coalers was conspicuous. Trading in Reading during the early part of the session constituted more than one third of the total and with Lehigh Valley which became increasingly active and strong in the second hour, overshadowed the remainder of the list. Board room gossip connected the name of a prominent trader who is reported to have lost heavily in the cotton market with the recent selling of stocks particularly Reading. This stock was offered so liberally today that it fell back to yesterday's closing after its early advance. Lehigh Valley rose 1⅜ and Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste Marie a point. Bonds were steady.

The market receded abruptly during the noon hour, the Harriman issues and St. Paul, Canadian Pacific and Virginia-Carolina Chemical preferred losing 1 to 5 points, with 1 point losses in Great Northern preferred, Great Northern Ore Certificates, New York Central, Norfolk & Western and St. Louis & San Francisco second preferred. Some other stocks were fractionally lower.

The selling movement assumed the proportions of a bear raid in the afternoon and prices gave way rapidly. The bear party professed alarm at cabled reports of Premier Asquith's speech on the Moroccan controversy but their attack apparently did not uncover a large amount of long stock. Canadian Pacific, the heaviest loser among the leading issues, declined 2⅝. Union Pacific's loss reached 2½. Southern Pacific fell back 2 and United States Steel, Louisville & Nashville, Atlantic Coast Line, Erie common and first preferred, Westinghouse Electric and American Sugar a point or more each.

The market closed heavy. Partial recovery was made in the last hour. Reading, Union Pacific and the Hill stocks all selling fractionally above the low range, but the list as a whole registered net losses.

Militiamen Have Excellent Record at Encampment.

Tanned and weary after ten days of active work in the annual camp of instruction, members of Company D, Third regiment, in command of Capt. Clyde Driesbach, arrived in the city Monday night on their return from Fort Benjamin Harrison at Indianapolis.

The Fort Wayne militiamen made an extremely creditable record in their work. They were prominent participants in a big war game move Monday morning, when they marched eight miles into the country, engaged in battle and later established a camp for the night, each man doing his own cooking. All were in excellent health during the entire ten days, not a man from Company D going to the hospital.

Puzzled Philosopher.

The philosopher had purchased a three pound steak for dinner. A little later his cook, having burned the meat, threw it away and reported that the cat had eaten it.

"Bring me the cat and I'll see," said the philosopher.

The cat was brought and placed on the scales. It weighed exactly three pounds.

"You were right," said the philosopher. "There are the three pounds of meat, but where is the cat?"—Chicago News.

GOING TO THE YELLOWSTONE

Fort Wayne People Plan Twelve Day Trip to National aPrk.

HAVE MAGNIFICENT SPECIAL TRAIN

Itinerary Includes a Stop With Fort Wayne People at Denver.

Next Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock one of the largest parties of tourists ever sent out of Fort Wayne will leave the city on a personally conducted trip to Yellowstone park, under the management of Agent John E. Ross. The party will have a special train, which will make the entire trip and which will be made up as follows: A buffet smoker, a dining car, three sleepers and an observation car, all practically new and with the most elaborate appointments.

The route will be over the Pennsylvania to Chicago, over the Chicago and Northwestern to Omaha, the Union Pacific to Granzer and the Oregon Short Line to Yellowstone park, the objective point, where the greater portion of the time will be spent.

Meals will be served on the train, a tonsorial artist will be there to serve all who may need his services, a physician will be in the party and provision will be made to meet other wants of the travelers, so it will not be necessary to leave the train except to view the scenery that cannot be viewed from the observation car or to look at some thing of interest away from the railway line. Twelve days will be consumed in the trip and the most of the time off the train will be devoted to a tour of the Yellowstone park. En route home a day's stop will be made in Denver, where the tourists will be met by a number of former Fort Wayne people and possibly be taken on an automobile tour of the city and the interesting points in that vicinity. The party will arrive home at 11:50 o'clock Saturday night, August 12, their train coming down from Chicago as the second section of Pennsylvania train No. 24.

This trip was conceived and worked up by John E. Ross, who will accompany the party to see that every want of the members is filled. The personnel of the party is as follows: Dr. W. H. Johnston, the osteopth; Mrs. W. H. Johnston, Miss Florence Johnston, Mr. W. E. Mossman, Mrs. G. A. Jacobs, Miss Gladys Williams, Mr. Geo. W. Lowe, Mrs. Geo. W. Lowe, Mr. Geo. W. Pixley, Mrs. Geo. W. Game of String Line.

With small children a simple game called string line is very popular and is played like this: A string should be stretched across a lawn some six to ten feet from the ground. At intervals along the line small packets of chocolates or sweets should be tied with an inch or two of thread that they may dangle.

The boys and girls should then be blindfolded in turn and, battledore in hand, be spun around thrice and then told to go and strike at the packet they want to have.

THE REASON.

INTO my smiling rosebud mouth
The smiling barber deftly hooks
His finger and pulls it awry
To get the whiskers in the nooks
At either corner, and he asks
And gives my head a scratch or two:
"Your head is very dirty. Don't
You think you need a nice shampoo?"

Then he says, "You need a massage."
But I insist that I do not.
And then he blisters my poor face
Within a towel reeking hot;
Then he insists I ought to have
A mess of tonic on my hair.
And that is why I hate to sit
Me in a barber's easy chair.

And all the while the barber breathes
His onion breath into my face
And hooks his finger 'neath my lip
And drags my mouth all out of place
A bootblack fumbles at my feet
And begs and begs me, with a whine,
To loosen up and come across
And let him give my shoes a shine.

Because I do not want a shine,
Because I hate the barber's hooks,
Because I want no shampoo and
Because my face the barber crooks,
Because I care for no massage
And want no tonic rubbed in me,
I hate to do it, but am forced
To use a safety razor. See?
—Houston Post.

Starting the Stopped.

One day an old farmer borrowed a mule from his neighbor. After he had finished his work he sent his fourteen-year-old boy to take it home. The boy had gone about half a mile when the mule stopped and positively refused to go any further. After the boy had almost pulled his arms off trying to get him to go an old doctor came along and asked, "Why, my son, what is the matter with your mule?"

"Why, sir, can't you see, he has balked!" cried the boy.

"Well," said the old man, opening his case and taking out a bottle labeled carbolic acid, "we'll see what we can do for him," and he poured some of the acid on the mule's back, and in much less time than it takes to write it the mule was galloping down the road at a rate he had never gone before.

The boy looked up in surprise and said, "Doctor, have you got any more of that stuff?"

"Yes," answered the man.

"Well, doctor, are you sure you have got a whole lot more of it?" he asked.

"I think I have plenty. What did you want to know for?" he asked, with a smile.

"Well, I wish you would pour some on me, doctor, for I've got to catch that mule," answered the boy.—National Monthly.
